Cliff Morris

Steinmetz family

Sikestonians selected for nation ad campaign

BY RON PORTER

Just to see how observant you are, we're going to conduct a quiz:

Which Sikeston residents are currently smiling out from the pages of no less than seven national magazines?

Ah! Caught you napping behind the pages of your Reader's Digest, haven't we.

The answer is Cliff Morris, 417 S. Kingshighway, and the Ron Steinmetz family, 914 Crescent Drive. They appear in a two-page advertising spread sponsored by State Farm Insurance Co., for which Morris is the local agent. The family portrait includes Steinmetz, his wife Helen, and their two children Ray 8, and Keith 5.

"I really don't know how I came to be selected," Morris said. "I know the company has a national advertsing program. They choose six agents from throughout the United States to use in their national advertsing. I was just selected from this part of the country."

Morris said the company's advertising program this year stresses magazines. The advertising featuring Morris and the Steinmetz family is appearing or has appeared in the June issues of Reader's Digest, and Field and Stream, the June and July issues of Farm Journal, the May issue of Money, the May 9 issue of Newsweek, May 23 issue of Time and the May 16 issue of U.S. News and World Report.

Morris said the ads may run again in the fall.

How does it feel to be a media star?

"I don't know if you could call me a media star," Morris laughed. "I feel very humble and appreciative of the company selecting me to use in their national advertising. I realize there are many many agents they could have used."

Steinmentz had a similar reaction. "I don't really feel that we are.," he said. "Cliff's the one who was picked out over a number of people. We're sort of riding on his fame."

Morris said the Steinmetz family was picked because it has a multiple line of insurance with the company.

The ad is slanted towards life insurance "and the Steinmetz family is representative of a young family in need of life insurance . . . besides that they're a fine family," Morris said.

"Cliff asked three families to pose for pictures for the ad and the advertsing department from State Farm Insurance took the pictures out at the Ramada Inn in February," Steinmetz said. The company then chose the picture they liked the best, he said.

The advertising copy was excerpted from a 25-minue interview conducted that day with the family, Steinmetz said.

The three families received a $25 sitting fee plus $1 for each family member in addition to the head of the family. The Steinmetz family then received an additional $75 when their picture was selected.

It was not much money, but "it was a good way to spend the hour between 12 and 1 p.m. waiting for the University of Louisville basketball game," Steinmetz said.

Steinmetz said there has been quite a bit of reaction among his friends.

He said many of them were not aware of the advertisement they discovered the ad while pasing through the magazines.

"Many of them say they never pay any attention to ads but Cliff Morris catches their eye... or maybe the family picture catches their eye," he said.

This was the first time that Morris has appeared in company advertising.

"And probably the last time," he added, pointing out that there are about 13,000 agents working for State Farm.

Has this whetted the Steinmetz appetite for something bigger? Television, movies?

"No, no. We have no ambitions in this area," Steinmetz said.

Terrorists reject appeals

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — Captive children chanted "We want to stay alive!" today as South Moluccan extremists holding more than 160 hostages again threatened to kill them if the Dutch government did not meet their demands. A deadline for death passed without apparent incident, however.

Two hours before the deadline at 2 p.m. local time (8 a.m. EDT), several children were brought to the windows of the village school in nearby Bovensmilde where they have been held for two days. They cried out in unison, "We want to stay alive, Van Agt."

Andries van Agt is the Dutch justice minister and the top government strategist in dealing with the gunmen.

Six gunmen were holding 105 children and six teachers in the school. Seven other terrorists, one believed to be a woman, were holding at least 55 hostages on a hijacked train stopped in the middle of open pastureland 10 miles north of here.

Earlier today the Asian militants spoke with senior Dutch officials by telephone for an hour, rejected a government appeal for release of the children and repeated their threat to shoot hostages.

The gunmen, members of an immigrant community from the former Dutch colony of the South Moluccan Islands, now part of Indonesia, were demanding release of 21 jailed countrymen and a jumbo jet flight, with hostages, from Amsterdam to an undisclosed destination.

Some South Moluccans are serving terms in Dutch jails for using political violence in the past in fruitless attempts to force the Dutch government to help them win independence from Indonesia for their homeland.

"If you dare not to meet our demands ... we will not hesitate or bluff to shoot down a number of hostages for your pleasure," the terrorists said in a letter to Dutch authorities that was released Tuesday.

The government refused to discuss any deals unless the schoolchildren were released first.

But, said Justice Ministry spokeswoman Toos Faber, "The terrorists see the children as their ace in the hole, their safeguard." She described the negotiations, conducted by telephone, as courteous and "businesslike."

The tension eased noticeably in Bovensmilde as the deadline passed with no sign of violence in the school building. Police who had been jumpy earlier simply sat down in the shade with their carbines and made no effort to stop reporters or other passers-by.

The gunmen, who seized the school and train in twin attacks Monday, also threatened killings if mediation was attempted, if authorities did not meet the deadline or if there were reprisals against other South Moluccans living in Holland.

A leader of the Moluccan community in the Netherlands, Dr. Theo Kuhuwael, a 63-yearold educator and civil servant, began a voluntary mediation effort Tuesday night. Officials said he had "orientation" meetings with local Moluccans but no immediate contact with the gunmen.

As Dutch voters went to the polls for national elections today, Prime Minister Joop Den Uyl conferred with Van Agt and other key ministers in The Hague.

Officials expressed growing concern for the condition and "mental state" of the young hostages, aged 6 to 12.

An authoritative source said at least three were known to be ill and were receiving medication sent in by police and administered by teachers held with the children in a classroom of the school.

Combat police and army troops, along with specially trained antiterrorist units, ringed both locations. An undisclosed number of specialists from Britain's elite antiterrorist Special Air Service regiment flew to The Netherlands today to "train and advise" the Dutch, it was announced in London.

Police had tightened security as the deadline neared. Reporters were not allowed to approach the school and villagers who live near it were told at police barricades, "If you go through the lines, you won't be allowed to come back out."

The telephone talks were initiated by terrorist leaders on the hijacked train.

At noon, two hours before the terrorists' deadline, Dutch authorities agreed to set up a direct telephone link between gunmen in the school and their comrades aboard the train.

About the same time, a group of South Moluccans from Bovensmilde walked to the school and appealed to the gunmen through a megaphone not to harm the children. There was no response.

Some of the terrorists were believed to have come from the small Moluccan community in this area.

A second group of about 30 South Moluccans from other Dutch communities marched to the school to hold a prayer service in front of the building.

After an emergency cabinet meeting Tuesday night, Den Uyl said the government would not allow hostages to be taken out of the country.

Council may get petition

A petition asking the removal of the two massage parlors and Book-arama book store from Sikeston may be presented this afternoon during the City Council Meeting.

There are 23 signatures on the petition, circulated Monday night at an interdenominational Bible study group, according to Merle Keefer, who hopes to present the petition to the council.

The petitioners are asking the council to do whatever they can to remove the two massage parlors and the bookstore because they "contribute to the moral decay of the city."

Book-arama, 114 E. Center St., is an adult bookstore which specializes in pornographic materials.

The two massage parlors are K's Massage Parlor, 223 W. Trotter St., and The Scorpio Massage, 1117 W. Malone Ave.

The council is meeting at 4 p.m. to discuss electric contracts with Associated Electric Cooperative.

Teasdale says he will sign bill increasing salaries of officials

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Joseph Teasdale, who initially questioned whether the public wanted to substantially increase the salaries of their statewide elected officials, says he now plans to sign that bill into law.

The bill would boost the salary level for the six officials into the top 10 of officials' compensation paid nationwide.

The pay raise measure was approved by the state Senate Tuesday on a 25-6 vote, a day after the senators narrowly approved another bill giving a $6,-600 annual increase to members of the General Asssembly.

The statewide elected officials pay raises would go into effect in 1981, with the exception of the auditor, who would get his in 1979.

Under the bill, a governor would be paid $55,000 compared to the present salary of $37,500, a lieutenant governor's salary would go from $16,000 to $30,000; attorney general from $25,000 to $45,000; secretary of state from $25,000 to $42,500 and auditor and treasurer from $20,000 to $42,500.

The Senate also gave final approval and sent back to the House a pay increase for judges in the state. The bill needs to be reconsidered by the House, since the pay raises authorized the judges were above those approved earlier in the House.

A special citizens compensation commission recommended judges of the state Supreme Courrt be paid $50,000 rather than the present salary of $36,500; appeals court judges would get $47,000 compared to the present salary of $34,000, and circuit judges would be paid $45,000 rather than the present $31,000.

But the House, where the argument prevailed that judges throughout the state have had their pay increased consistently over the past few years, reduced the pay increases for the judges by $2,000 to $4,000.

The Senate adopted an amendment to the bill Tuesday, increasing the pay raises back to the original amount recommended by the compensation commission. The differences between the House and Senate over the judges salaries will be worked out in a compromise committee of the two chambers.

Walsh will argue for prison site area north of Kansas City

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — James Walsh, state Social Services director, says he will ask Gov. Joseph Teasdale to ignore a Senate committee's rejection of plans to build a medium-security prison in Clay County, and go ahead with plans to buy the property.

Teasdale had reportedly been close to closing the deal on the sale of the land in the Birmingham Bottoms area north of Kansas City.

"I'm not changing in any way," Walsh said Tuesday. "I will argue vociferously for the Birmingham Bottoms site because it is in the best interest of the people of Missouri and the corrections system."

Walsh's remarks came shortly after Teasdale told a news conference in Kansas City that he would halt his plan to build the medium-security prison in the Kansas City area until the legislature could decide what it wants to do about the prison.

The Senate Appropriations Committee voted Monday to eliminate funds from the capital improvements funding bill which were earmarked for the medium-security prison. Instead, the committeee voted in favor of building a new maximum-security prison in the Jefferson City area.

The governor said he was surprised at the senators' action but "glad they changed their mind before we signed a contract to purchase the Kansas City land. It is certainly their prerogative to pass laws and appropriate money. If their final action is to change the site, we will proceed under the law."

Walsh said to change the prison plans now "reduces the Missouri corrections system to the point of being a system that is cruel and unusual in its treatment of men who have violated the law."

He said it was "beyond belief" that the committee voted to eliminate funding for the proposed medium-security prison. The panel's action, however, must still be endorsed by both the Senate and the House.

The legislature, which has criticized state officials during the past two years for dragging their feet in locating a site for the $21-million facility, has promoted locating the prison near an urban area.

But Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Donald Manford, D+Lee's Summit, said the state needs to decide how to best use the limited funds available for corrections. Manford contends that by constructing a maximum-security prison instead of the other prisons, the "hard-core" prisoner will be taken out of existing mediumsecurity prisons and conditions there will improve.

Parking crackdown draws criticism from citizens

BLOOMFIELD— The recent decision by the City Council to crack down on violators of the city's parking meter ordinances has met with criticism from citizens, members of the council reported Tuesday night.

Alderman Bill Harris said one citizen became obnoxious after he had received a parking ticket, cursing the alderman when he went to talk over the problem.

The decision to enforce the ordinance came after a discussion at a meeting earlier this month when the lack of enforcement was described as a "mockery" by Harris.

In spite of the criticism, council members agreed to continue the hard line policy and to ready themselves for another wave of criticism from the decision to crack down on citizens who have not purchased city stickers.

In spite of the difficulties, Mayor M. E. "Bud" Bresee commented, "I think the hassle is over."

Alderman Carl Neuber, who had received criticism from a group of women, agreed that criticism from citizens is over now.

Another touchy situation the council handled Tuesday night was pay for city employes.

In an executive session after the regular session, the council agreed to equalize the pay of the three department heads, setting the base pay at $140 per week.

Previously the pay of the water department head, street department supervisor and chief of police were "quite a bit a week off," Bresee said, so much so that one employe hired recently was earning more than his supervisor.

At the same time, the base pay was set, the council decided to give the water superintendent position a slightly higher salary, since it calls for work to be done on weekends and holidays and to allow provisions for overtime and time off for all positions.

The council agreed to pay the regular employes slightly more than minimum wage. "They all got a little increase in pay," Bresee said.

The decision was unanimous and took just three or four minutes to decide.

After discussion, in which Alderman Larry Lancaster stated his opposition, the board agreed to sell an old vehicle used as an ambulance to Ed's Auto Sales of Aquilla for $225.

"That's giving it away," Lancaster objected, saying the city could get more value out of it than that by keeping it and putting it to some use.

The city had asked for bids for the vehicle, with the lowest bid received being $100. Six bids were received.

Lancaster asked if the Jaycees could get light equipment set up at city tennis courts, would the city pay for the electricity?

After discussion, Bresee suggested business people would volunteer funds to pay for the electricity to help the youth of the town.

In other business, the council heard a report from Neuber about a sewage seminar he attended Tuesday at Sikeston; decided to have city engineers look into the water and wate storage situation in town; decided to gravel a short stretch of road on Gillen St. in the northwest part of town; and tentatively agreed to an idea proposed by the Ministerial Alliance that the churches would clean and fix up city sidewalks, if the city would furnish mateirals.

Lancaster reported that a dog vaccination day will be held from 3-5 p.m. June 8 at the fire station. Cost will be $5 per dog--$4 for the vaccination and $1 for city license.

Welfare law revisions go to governor

JEFFESON CITY, Mo. (A) — Federally-mandated revisions in the welfare laws cleared the Missouri Senate on Tuesday and were sent to Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale.

The Senate's action came under the threat that the federal government would withhold about 380 million in welfare program funds if the revisions were not adopted.

A House-passed measure which would heve prohibited public institutions from buying foeign been was killed in the upper chamber. Nritics claimed it was anti-competitive and penalized persons who unknowingly buy foreign-prodsced beef.

The welfare revision meas-sre, which was a priority of Teasdale, wes a compromise of vesions that cleared the two chambers. It was endorsed Monday night by the House.

While the main result of the bill would be to create a plan to secure support from parents who have deserted their welfare children, the bill elso makes a major change in the way the state provides welfare assistance.

Under the present system, any person meeting the standard income test receives a flat grant for himself and his children.

The new method calls for the state Division of Family Services to determine the average need of a person or family in bmissouri.

Persons qualifying for welfare assistance would then heve eny income subtracted from that figure and they would receive the difference as assistance money from the government. A maxium subsidy isalso set under the law, and depends on the size of the family. The actuel assistance payment would be limited by the amount of money authorized for welfare progrems in any one year.

Backers of the bill contend that the state will be able to provide a greater amount of money to those who really need it under the new system without increasing the overall state expenditures on welfare.

The proposal to secure support from absent parents is intended ultimately to save the state money by reducing the financial burden of welfare families with absent parents. bstate estimates place the income from the program once it is fully underway at more than $10 million a year for the state and more than $2 million a year for the counties.

The bill requiring public institutions to buy domestic beef was sponsored by Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin, A Hornersville Democrat.

When the measure was first considered in the Senate, it was required to make it the state's public policy, although not illegal, to buy the foreign beef with public funds, but the House restored the bill to its original version.

Violations of the bill would have constituted a misdemeanor.

Tinnin called it "an encouragement to the beef producers in this state," but Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R+Ladue, seid t4e measure was "a ridiculous prohibition."

He said school district superintendents could be prosecuted for unknowingly purchasing beef which had been imported.

The bill was defeated 10-21.

The House approved and returned to the Senate prohibitions against re-recording phonographic records or tapes for commercial sale without the consent of the owner.

The proposal would make it illegal to sell the so-called "bootleg tapes," which backers claim are undermining the quality of the record industry.

The House also gave final approval to exemption of prescription drugs and insulin from the sales tax, forwarding that measure to the Senate where sponsor Bob Feigenbaum, D+Florissant, says he has gained assurances that it will be considered.

Walsh's remarks came shortly after Teasdale told a news conference in Kansas City that he would halt his plan to build the medium-security prison in the Kansas City area until the legislature could decide what it wants to do about the prison.

The Senate Appropriations Committee voted Monday to eliminate funds from the capital improvements funding bill which were earmarked for the medium-security prison. Instead, the committeee voted in favor of building a new maximum-security prison in the Jefferson City area.

The governor said he was surprised at the senators' action but "glad they changed their mind before we signed a contract to purchase the Kansas City land. It is certainly their prerogative to pass laws and appropriate money. If their final action is to change the site, we will proceed under the law."

Walsh said to change the prison plans now "reduces the Missouri corrections system to the point of being a system that is cruel and unusual in its treatment of men who have violated the law."

He said it was "beyond belief" that the committee voted to eliminate funding for the proposed medium-security prison. The panel's action, however, must still be endorsed by both the Senate and the House.

The legislature, which has criticized state officials during the past two years for dragging their feet in locating a site for the $21-million facility, has promoted locating the prison near an urban area.

But Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Donald Manford, D+Lee's Summit, said the state needs to decide how to best use the limited funds available for corrections. Manford contends that by constructing a maximum-security prison instead of the other prisons, the "hard-core" prisoner will be taken out of existing mediumsecurity prisons and conditions there will improve.

Parking crackdown draws criticism from citizens

BLOOMFIELD— The recent decision by the City Council to crack down on violators of the city's parking meter ordinances has met with criticism from citizens, members of the council reported Tuesday night.

Alderman Bill Harris said one citizen became obnoxious after he had received a parking ticket, cursing the alderman when he went to talk over the problem.

The decision to enforce the ordinance came after a discussion at a meeting earlier this month when the lack of enforcement was described as a "mockery" by Harris.

In spite of the criticism, council members agreed to continue the hard line policy and to ready themselves for another wave of criticism from the decision to crack down on citizens who have not purchased city stickers.

In spite of the difficulties, Mayor M. E. "Bud" Bresee commented, "I think the hassle is over."

Alderman Carl Neuber, who had received criticism from a group of women, agreed that criticism from citizens is over now.

Another touchy situation the council handled Tuesday night was pay for city employes.

In an executive session after the regular session, the council agreed to equalize the pay of the three department heads, setting the base pay at $140 per week.

Previously the pay of the water department head, street department supervisor and chief of police were "quite a bit a week off," Bresee said, so much so that one employe hired recently was earning more than his supervisor.

At the same time, the base pay was set, the council decided to give the water superintendent position a slightly higher salary, since it calls for work to be done on weekends and holidays and to allow provisions for overtime and time off for all positions.

The council agreed to pay the regular employes slightly more than minimum wage. "They all got a little increase in pay," Bresee said.

The decision was unanimous and took just three or four minutes to decide.

After discussion, in which Alderman Larry Lancaster stated his opposition, the board agreed to sell an old vehicle used as an ambulance to Ed's Auto Sales of Aquilla for $225.

"That's giving it away," Lancaster objected, saying the city could get more value out of it than that by keeping it and putting it to some use.

The city had asked for bids for the vehicle, with the lowest bid received being $100. Six bids were received.

Lancaster asked if the Jaycees could get light equipment set up at city tennis courts, would the city pay for the electricity?

After discussion, Bresee suggested business people would volunteer funds to pay for the electricity to help the youth of the town.

In other business, the council heard a report from Neuber about a sewage seminar he attended Tuesday at Sikeston; decided to have city engineers look into the water and wate storage situation in town; decided to gravel a short stretch of road on Gillen St. in the northwest part of town; and tentatively agreed to an idea proposed by the Ministerial Alliance that the churches would clean and fix up city sidewalks, if the city would furnish mateirals.

Lancaster reported that a dog vaccination day will be held from 3-5 p.m. June 8 at the fire station.Cost will be $5 per dog--$4 for the vaccination and $1 for city license.

Welfare law revisions go to governor

JEFFESON CITY, Mo. (A) — Federally-mandated revisions in the welfare laws cleared the Missouri Senate on Tuesday and were sent to Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale.

The Senate's action came under the threat that the federal government would withhold about 380 million in welfare program funds if the revisions were not adopted.

A House-passed measure which would heve prohibited public institutions from buying foeign been was killed in the upper chamber. Nritics claimed it was anti-competitive and penalized persons who unknowingly buy foreign-prodsced beef.

The welfare revision meas-sre, which was a priority of Teasdale, wes a compromise of vesions that cleared the two chambers. It was endorsed Monday night by the House.

While the main result of the bill would be to create a plan to secure support from parents who have deserted their welfare children, the bill elso makes a major change in the way the state provides welfare assistance.

Under the present system, any person meeting the standard income test receives a flat grant for himself and his children.

The new method calls for the state Division of Family Services to determine the average need of a person or family in bmissouri.

Persons qualifying for welfare assistance would then heve eny income subtracted from that figure and they would receive the difference as assistance money from the government. A maxium subsidy isalso set under the law, and depends on the size of the family. The actuel assistance payment would be limited by the amount of money authorized for welfare progrems in any one year.

Backers of the bill contend that the state will be able to provide a greater amount of money to those who really need it under the new system without increasing the overall state expenditures on welfare.

The proposal to secure support from absent parents is intended ultimately to save the state money by reducing the financial burden of welfare families with absent parents. bstate estimates place the income from the program once it is fully underway at more than $10 million a year for the state and more than $2 million a year for the counties.

The bill requiring public institutions to buy domestic beef was sponsored by Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin, A Hornersville Democrat.

When the measure was first considered in the Senate, it was required to make it the state's public policy, although not illegal, to buy the foreign beef with public funds, but the House restored the bill to its original version.

Violations of the bill would have constituted a misdemeanor.

Tinnin called it "an encouragement to the beef producers in this state," but Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R+Ladue, seid t4e measure was "a ridiculous prohibition."

He said school district superintendents could be prosecuted for unknowingly purchasing beef which had been imported.

The bill was defeated 10-21.

The House approved and returned to the Senate prohibitions against re-recording phonographic records or tapes for commercial sale without the consent of the owner.

The proposal would make it illegal to sell the so-called "bootleg tapes," which backers claim are undermining the quality of the record industry.

The House also gave final approval to exemption of prescription drugs and insulin from the sales tax, forwarding that measure to the Senate where sponsor Bob Feigenbaum, D+Florissant, says he has gained assurances that it will be considered.

COMMON SENSE WINS ONE

The Carter administration is firmly committed to cutting the government red tape that frustrates businesses and complicates all our lives, says Bert Lance, director of the White House Office of Management and Budget.

"That alone will help restore public confidence in government," says the former Atlanta banker. "Business is spending too much time fooling with government forms and government regulations."

Of which there is no end. Last year, the Federal Register contained 57,000 pages of notices, rules and regulations issued by government agencies. The 94th Congress enacted 588 news public laws, each carrying its own economic impact. The Commission on Federal Paperwork conservatively estimates that federal reporting requirements alone cost $40 billion a year.

If the Carter people are really serious about tackling this problem, they might take a fresh look at an idea that has been kicking around Washington since at least 1974. Originally advanced by the National Canners Association during the economic summit meeting held that year, the idea is to require every proposed new regulation or law to first undergo a cost- benefit analysis to make sure the public gains more than it loses.

As an example of well-intentioned but unnecessarily costly regulation, the Food and Drug Administration a year ago proposed that labels on canned foods bear drained-weight information showing how much fruit or vegetable was in the container after liquid was poured out. This would have involved taking samples off the production line, storing them for a month, opening them and then weighing and destroying the contents.

The canners submitted data showing that the regulation would cost $104 million a year and add about a cent more to each can or jar of food. Instead, they suggested a voluntary program, costing only $10 million, in which the solid weight of raw food was weighed before it was put in the can. The FDA agreed to try out the simpler, less expensive plan.

It was one small victory for common sense. Now the canners' idea of making cost- benefit analyses mandatory has been revived on Capitol Hill in the form of the Regulatory Cost Impact Act, which has been introduced by bipartisan supporters.

The act would require every federal agency to prepare a consumer cost assessment setting forth the direct and indirect costs, as well as the benefits, of any proposed regulation or legislation that may have a significant impact on costs to consumers.

The Regulatory Cost Impact Act would, of course, generate new paperwork of its own. But in this case, more would really be less in the long run.

THOSE WASTEFUL OBSCENITY LAWS

From The Newsletter Of The Section Of Individual Rights and Responsibilities Of The American Bar Association

It has now been six years since the Lockhart Commission recommended that all laws restricting adult access to pornography be repealed. The Minnesota State Bar Association has approved this recommendation, but to date neither the American Bar Association nor any state legislature has done so. It is time now for this section to tackle the difficult task of getting the American Bar Association behind the effort to repeal obscenity laws.

The lead article in this Newsletter describes the futile attempts by the Supreme Court to define "obscenity." Perhaps the litmus test is that given by Chief Justice Warren Burger in one of the 1973 cases, where he describes the book "Suite 69" as follows: "It is made up entirely of repetitive descriptions of physical, sexual conduct, 'clinical' explicit and offensive to the point of being nauseous."

Obscenity, it appears, is that which causes a majority of the Supreme Court to become nauseous.

The fact is that people who find pornography nauseating or distasteful need not read it or watch it. But by what mandate do they presume to take away the freedoms of of those who do not share their distaste? Not only do they wish to prevent consumers from purchasing books and watching movies of which they disapprove; their moral purity leads them to enact and enforce criminal laws to throw into jail those who sell such items.

This summer the Supreme Court upheld a Detroit zoning ordinance which regulated "adult movies," even though such movies may not be obscene. Justice Stevens stated that "even though we recognize that the First Amendment will not tolerate the total suppression of erotic material ... it is manifest that society's interest in protecting this type of expression is of a wholly different, and lesser, magnitude than the interest in untrammeled political debate ... (F)ew of us would march our sons and daughters off to war to preserve the citizen's right to see 'Specified Sexual Activites' exhibited in the theaters of our choice."

As the four dissenters point out, however, "if the guarantees of the First Amendment were reserved for expression that more than a 'few of us' would take up arms to defend, then the right of free expression would be defined and circumscribed by current popular opinion. The guarantees of the Bill of Rights were designed to protect against precisely such majoritarian limitations on individual liberty."

The true obscenity is the waste of taxpayers' money in trying to enforce pornography laws. The Supreme Court of Puerto Rico suggested that law enforcement officers should concentrate their efforts on murderers, burglars and other dangerous criminals in the future. "Confiscation of books, magazines and newspapers by agents of the public order is too reminiscent of the tragic Nazi era to be a tolerable activity," the court said.

Pornography laws should be repealed for the same reasons accepted by the American Bar Association when it voted to decriminalize sexual activities among consenting adults. This section has tackled tough issues in the past, and as Jerome Shestack pointed out at the tenth anniversary luncheon, the ABA is today more sensitive and more enlightened becuase of it. It's time how to make a frontal attack on obscenity laws.

ON-THE-FARM 'TRAINING'

Unfortunately, decisions affecting government farm policy are made in Washington which is not only a long way from our Saline County farms, but the decisions are also concocted too often by people who have little or no real understanding of agriculture.

Oh yes, there are lots of legislators and administrators who "own" farms, but we question how many of them "know" farming. We're sure that if you ask your farm friends they'll probably tell you that one of their main concerns is how to "educate" those people who have the power to control their business from as far away as Washington. Maybe a little on-the-farm "training" would be a step in the right direction.

One of the problems farmers face is the fact that 95 per cent of the U.S. citizens are not involved directly in farming and don't really understand the agriculture industry. It's true. Not many of us realize or appreciate the large amount of physical labor required to produce our food or the many forces controlling farm production... fluctuating markets, bad weather, labor problems, high production costs. More importantly, very few of us realize the vast number of laws and regulations that are inefficient, expensive and incentive- destroying for the farmer.

So maybe on-the-farm "training" or "education" of legislators, administrators and other nonfarmers would definitely be a step in the right direction.

We just believe that the more one knows about something, better decisions will be made. And there's no doubt that there's lots of room for improvement in that area.

We're inviting them to come on down to the farm sometime. — The (Marshall) Democrat News

BROOKFIELD SCHOOL CUTS ACTIVITIES

The large Brookfield school last week joined a long procession of other school districts in Missouri that are either closing or cutting down on activities because of a lack of funds with which to operate.

In addition to cutting out all extra-curricular activites, the school board said it is discontinuing drivers education, kindergarten, an assistant principal's position, a vocal music teacher, an instrumental music teacher, a junior high guidance counselor, a high school English teacher and all teacher's aids. Salaries of teachers were increased from a base of $7,700 to $8,200.

The cut-backs followed failure to pass an increased tax levy. Probably none of us are eager to pay more taxes, but if we are to continue to invest in our most valuable product -- children and their education -- we may as well adjust to the fact and vote more money for schools.

Paris did. For this we are grateful.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

NO END FOR FOREIGH AID

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

The big-spending liberals are sounding off with their annual regrets about the defects of foreign aid. So what else is new! They will end up voting for it, as they always do.

Hubert Humphrey calls foreign aid "an administrative nightmare." President Carter refers to its "mismanagement and inefficiency." Foreign aid boss John J. Gilligan, former governor of Ohio, says, mea culpa, mea culpa, we have "more chiefs than braves" in the agency.

Nobody enthusiastically defends foreign aid anymore but it is still holding steady at its annual level of $6 billion.

Despite all the regrets, you can bet it will be approved again this year.

The U.S. foreign giveaway program since World War II has cost the American taxpayers well over $200 billion, which is almost half the public debt. This is the equivalent of the assessed valuation of all U.S. cities with a population of 100,000 or more. The United States has given foreign aid to 121 of the 130 nations in the world and to 99 per cent of the world's population.

Foreign aid, including interest on the money the federal government borrows to give away, is a major cause of the high taxes we pay. Foreign aid is also a major cause of high prices because it annually takes billions of dollars worth of goods out of the U.S. economy without a corresponding reduction in local purchasing power.

Foreign aid has wiped out thousands of American jobs. For 30 years, various foreign aid agencies and programs have given foreign countries our most modern machinery and equipment, and foreign aid dollars have brought foreign technicians to America to study and take home our latest technology.

With low-cost foreign labor, with taxes only a small fraction of ours and with ultramodern U.S. machinery and technology provided free by the United States, foreign industry has been able to undersell much of our domestic production.

Why does America continue, year after year, to dole out our hard-earned American dollars when we need this money so badly at home for so many projects and to give relief to our hard-pressed taxpayers?

We are told that foreign aid is designed for our own security. Yet, America is far less secure today than before foreign aid began. We used to be told that the objective of foreign aid was to stop Communist aggression. That isn't a very persuasive argument since five new countries have fallen to communism in the last several years. Many billions of our foreign giveaways even have gone directly to the Soviet Union and other Communist governments.

For 30 years, U.S. foreign aid has been generously dispensed to friend and foe, to good credit risks and to deadbeats, to governments that are polite to us and to governments that insult us and vote against us in the United Nations.

Now North Vietnam is demanding more than $2 billion in foreign aid supposedly promised by President Nixon.

With our foreign handout record, it is no wonder that North Vietnam is optimistic about climbing aboard the gravy train, too.

Although nearly every other Communist country in the world has, at some time, received American aid, Congress should decisively reject aid to North Vietnam which still refuses to account for our servicemen missing in action.

Memo to Karl Marx:
Miners and Hard Hats heading for $650 weekly wage-benefit income

NEW YORK — Just to discomfit those neo-Marxists, now de-winterizing their communes, I want to report that the proletarians known as operating engineers in White Plains (N.Y.) recently won a $127.60 raise per man per week in wages, with some mighty fine fringes on top.

Thus for a 40-hour-week the new rate will be $690.40. This is for 1977. There will be more in 1978. And just so no one pictures me as a provincial, there is, word from Murphysboro, Ill., that the new pipefitters weekly rate there is $520 in wages and fringes. Actually the average national construction industry union wage-benefit cost per employee is $11.60 an hour or $464 weekly. True, these are average figures. But the hard-hat working class is doing well and will do better as construction picks up.

There hasn't been much heavy coverage on this front though we're in the peak labor-management negotiating season. Except for a strike or two in Akron, Ohio, and Kansas City it's all been "peaceful." So the big black type isn't broken out.

But behind those closed hotel room doors in Washington, where Glenn Watts's telephone workers (CWA) have been coordinating with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in a confrontation with the Bell System over wage-fringe hikes for almost 700,000 AT&T employes, and in some five Miami hotels where the steel union is bargaining with the basic metals corporations and in more secluded eye-balling in a series of other fields, changes in American's life styles are on the table.

Union demands now are ranging all the way from guarantees of a lifetime job to company establishment of alcohol rehabilitation centers.

There's no predicting, for example, what may come out of the current United Steelworkers (USWA) negotiations with the big aluminum companies. Some contracts ago they set precedent for cost of living adjustment for pensions of retirees.

Now this section of the USWA is pounding the table for some sort of lifetime job security -- which the union couldn't win from the Big Ten steel corporations last month. The aluminum industry has been accused by its peers of being "soft."

So there may well come some sort of Japanese-type job-for-life formula when the bargaining room doors are opened.

There's also a union demand for a nickel-an-hour increase for every one point jump in the Consumer Price Index. This once was a two-and-a-half-cents hike in most industries. Then three and a third pennies an hour. A nickel-an-hour cost-of-living adjustment could put an additional $100 a week into the pay envelope during a three-year contract -- atop the regular wage increase.

Thus we now see the Communication Workers of America demanding cost of living adjustment on retirees' pensions, job security, upgrading of jobs traditionally held by women and a substantial wage increase. The numbers are big here. Everything gets multiplied by 700,000. So the Bell System is hanging in tough.

The CWA-AT&T contract expires Aug. 6. And I've heard union president Glenn Watts say that if there's no agreement that night there will be a national phone strike the morning of Aug. 7.

Watts is counting on a long one -- during which the new competition to AT&T, from independents in many fields such as repair and data processing, etc., will pressure "Ma Bell." Of course, the CWA counts on breakdowns in the super-sophisticated telephone company technology. This one could go any direction -- including the White House. There, Watts has friends.

Earlier this year, Vice President Walter Mondale wished the union mighty good luck during a visit of a CWA committee to his suite in the Old Executive Office Bulding. And President Carter isn't forgetting his early-on-the-campaign-train friends.

As for other quietly tense bargaining arenas, there are negotiations in the men's and boys' tailored clothing field. There the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers' Union is seeking substantial pay hikes for 80,000 members – and a common front with the manufacturers against imports.

And the rail unions have served notice on the big lines. Their new contract demands include such items as health coverage for employes and their dependents until the age of 65-- which could mean brothers, mothers, sisters and adult children, et al. Also up to 80 per cent of dental costs.

The East and Gulf Coast longshoremen (ILA) are toughening their demands with a bid for an $80-a-week increase in negotiations for a new contract replacing the one expiring Sept. 30. The longshoremen already have lifetime job guarantees.

And there are the ever-darkening chaotic coal negotiations involving 125,000 miners who now get $100 a day in wages and fringes. Energy demand being what it is -- wage-fringe cost would go to over $600 a week per coaldigger.

Someone should revise Karl Marx's "Das Kapital." There's nothing petty about the bourgeoisie.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Tip O'Neill Scores High Marks

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill, the great grizzly bear of the House, loomed massively behind the marble rostrum. He surveyed the House floor with an imperious eye and rapped his gavel for order. Then he slumped into his throne-like leather chair and, with studied detachment, began leafing through the House calendar.

On the floor below, an Alabama congressman whispered to a colleague, indicating the Speaker. "He's a good ol' boy." a Boston politician.

During his first four months as Speaker, the bear-hugging, back-slapping he has also emerged as the second most powerful man in Washington.

He is too much of a Boston politician to behave otherwise. His natural environment is a smoke-filled backroom. He enthusiastically contributes to the pollution by blowing out great billows of cigar smoke. His massive bulk always dominates the room, with his lion's mane of white hair the most visible landmark through the smog.

Tip O'Neill is Democrat, Catholic and Irish in that order. He is a tower of affability, full of goodwill and Irish songs. Yet this genial friend of the people has an inner toughness tempered by the rough-and-tumble of Boston politics.

We have talked to two dozen congressional leaders about their new Speaker. To encourage candor, we promised not to identify them. Almost to a man, they praised O'Neill as a strong leader who has taken full charge of the House.

But they had their criticisms, which our reporters, Marc Smolonsky and Jack Mitchell, took up with him during a lengthy interview.

Perhaps the Speaker's greatest weakness, in the opinion of his House colleagues, is that he's too parochial. He is inclined, they say, to put Boston ahead of the nation. "Tip hasn't shown that he can rise above local issues," one colleague put it.

O'Neill shrugged off the criticism. "Every Member of Congress looks out for the economic interests of his home district," he snorted. "But," he insisted, "I'm a national legislator and always have been."

Others complained about O'Neill's political style. "He'll never escape the vestiges of his Boston political background," said one congressman. The Speaker conceded that the characterization was accurate but claimed his Boston political training was his greatest strength.

"I'm a door-opener," he said. "That's my life-style." His backroom manner, his ability to strike a deal. his give-and-take operation -- these were the secrets of his success, he said.

Despite O'Neill's long legislative experience going back 41 years to the Massachusetts legislature, several congressmen agreed that he doesn't have a strong grasp of the issues. "He's more of a politician than a tactician," explained a Midwestern congressman.

The Speaker conceded that he isn't a "floor legislator" and that he relies upon colleagues with a better technical command of complex legislation. "But," he said, "I'll take to the floor when I have to."

Other House Members accused O'Neill of not being assertive enough at the White House. They charged that he began pushing the president's energy program even before it reached Congress. "Not true," retorted Tip. He began boosting an energy program, he said, before Carter became president.

There have been contrary reports in the press that the Speaker has been overbearing at the White House, that he doesn't get along with the president. O'Neill confessed he had turned down several invitations to dine with Carter at the White House. The Speaker said that he had intended no offense but that White House aides apparently had been upset. He attributed the press reports to them.

He said he actually had "great affection" for Carter. "We're part of the same team, and I'm a team player." As long as Carter is the "leader of our party," said O'Neill, "He's the man I'm going to work with."

Other Democratic colleagues accused the Speaker of being overly accomodating in order not to offend any political faction. "I'm a listener," he replied affably. "That's one of my virtues." But, he cautioned, "I know how to be firm without vaccillating."

There were several complaints about committee assignments. One congressman griped over the appointment of Rep. Thomas "Lud" Ashley, D.-Ohio, as chairman of the new House Energy Committee. "Ashley knows nothing about energy," the legislator grumped.

O'Neill said he wanted a chairman who wouldn't fight for regional energy interests. "I chose Lud Ashley purposely," the Speaker explained. "Everybody defends his own energy interests. I wanted to get away from parochialism. Ashley has no reputation as a parochial energy fighter."

Other congressmen complained that O'Neill permitted too many legislators to choose their own committee assignments. This practice originally left the Judiciary Committee short of members. There was nothing wrong, O'Neill contended, with letting senior members choose their commiitee preferences.

Despite the criticism, his House colleagues gave Speaker O'Neill a good report card. Most thought he had developed into an effective Speaker. One put it even stronger. "Tip has the potential," he said, "to become the best Speaker we've ever had."

COMMON SENSE WINS ONE

The Carter administration is firmly committed to cutting the government red tape that frustrates businesses and complicates all our lives, says Bert Lance, director of the White House Office of Management and Budget.

"That alone will help restore public confidence in government," says the former Atlanta banker. "Business is spending too much time fooling with government forms and government regulations."

Of which there is no end. Last year, the Federal Register contained 57,000 pages of notices, rules and regulations issued by government agencies. The 94th Congress enacted 588 news public laws, each carrying its own economic impact. The Commission on Federal Paperwork conservatively estimates that federal reporting requirements alone cost $40 billion a year.

If the Carter people are really serious about tackling this problem, they might take a fresh look at an idea that has been kicking around Washington since at least 1974. Originally advanced by the National Canners Association during the economic summit meeting held that year, the idea is to require every proposed new regulation or law to first undergo a cost- benefit analysis to make sure the public gains more than it loses.

As an example of well-intentioned but unnecessarily costly regulation, the Food and Drug Administration a year ago proposed that labels on canned foods bear drained-weight information showing how much fruit or vegetable was in the container after liquid was poured out. This would have involved taking samples off the production line, storing them for a month, opening them and then weighing and destroying the contents.

The canners submitted data showing that the regulation would cost $104 million a year and add about a cent more to each can or jar of food. Instead, they suggested a voluntary program, costing only $10 million, in which the solid weight of raw food was weighed before it was put in the can. The FDA agreed to try out the simpler, less expensive plan.

It was one small victory for common sense. Now the canners' idea of making cost- benefit analyses mandatory has been revived on Capitol Hill in the form of the Regulatory Cost Impact Act, which has been introduced by bipartisan supporters.

The act would require every federal agency to prepare a consumer cost assessment setting forth the direct and indirect costs, as well as the benefits, of any proposed regulation or legislation that may have a significant impact on costs to consumers.

The Regulatory Cost Impact Act would, of course, generate new paperwork of its own. But in this case, more would really be less in the long run.

THOSE WASTEFUL OBSCENITY LAWS

From The Newsletter Of The Section Of Individual Rights and Responsibilities Of The American Bar Association

It has now been six years since the Lockhart Commission recommended that all laws restricting adult access to pornography be repealed. The Minnesota State Bar Association has approved this recommendation, but to date neither the American Bar Association nor any state legislature has done so. It is time now for this section to tackle the difficult task of getting the American Bar Association behind the effort to repeal obscenity laws.

The lead article in this Newsletter describes the futile attempts by the Supreme Court to define "obscenity." Perhaps the litmus test is that given by Chief Justice Warren Burger in one of the 1973 cases, where he describes the book "Suite 69" as follows: "It is made up entirely of repetitive descriptions of physical, sexual conduct, 'clinical' explicit and offensive to the point of being nauseous."

Obscenity, it appears, is that which causes a majority of the Supreme Court to become nauseous.

The fact is that people who find pornography nauseating or distasteful need not read it or watch it. But by what mandate do they presume to take away the freedoms of of those who do not share their distaste? Not only do they wish to prevent consumers from purchasing books and watching movies of which they disapprove; their moral purity leads them to enact and enforce criminal laws to throw into jail those who sell such items.

This summer the Supreme Court upheld a Detroit zoning ordinance which regulated "adult movies," even though such movies may not be obscene. Justice Stevens stated that "even though we recognize that the First Amendment will not tolerate the total suppression of erotic material ... it is manifest that society's interest in protecting this type of expression is of a wholly different, and lesser, magnitude than the interest in untrammeled political debate ... (F)ew of us would march our sons and daughters off to war to preserve the citizen's right to see 'Specified Sexual Activites' exhibited in the theaters of our choice."

As the four dissenters point out, however, "if the guarantees of the First Amendment were reserved for expression that more than a 'few of us' would take up arms to defend, then the right of free expression would be defined and circumscribed by current popular opinion. The guarantees of the Bill of Rights were designed to protect against precisely such majoritarian limitations on individual liberty."

The true obscenity is the waste of taxpayers' money in trying to enforce pornography laws. The Supreme Court of Puerto Rico suggested that law enforcement officers should concentrate their efforts on murderers, burglars and other dangerous criminals in the future. "Confiscation of books, magazines and newspapers by agents of the public order is too reminiscent of the tragic Nazi era to be a tolerable activity," the court said.

Pornography laws should be repealed for the same reasons accepted by the American Bar Association when it voted to decriminalize sexual activities among consenting adults. This section has tackled tough issues in the past, and as Jerome Shestack pointed out at the tenth anniversary luncheon, the ABA is today more sensitive and more enlightened becuase of it. It's time how to make a frontal attack on obscenity laws.

ON-THE-FARM 'TRAINING'

Unfortunately, decisions affecting government farm policy are made in Washington which is not only a long way from our Saline County farms, but the decisions are also concocted too often by people who have little or no real understanding of agriculture.

Oh yes, there are lots of legislators and administrators who "own" farms, but we question how many of them "know" farming. We're sure that if you ask your farm friends they'll probably tell you that one of their main concerns is how to "educate" those people who have the power to control their business from as far away as Washington. Maybe a little on-the-farm "training" would be a step in the right direction.

One of the problems farmers face is the fact that 95 per cent of the U.S. citizens are not involved directly in farming and don't really understand the agriculture industry. It's true. Not many of us realize or appreciate the large amount of physical labor required to produce our food or the many forces controlling farm production... fluctuating markets, bad weather, labor problems, high production costs. More importantly, very few of us realize the vast number of laws and regulations that are inefficient, expensive and incentive- destroying for the farmer.

So maybe on-the-farm "training" or "education" of legislators, administrators and other nonfarmers would definitely be a step in the right direction.

We just believe that the more one knows about something, better decisions will be made. And there's no doubt that there's lots of room for improvement in that area.

We're inviting them to come on down to the farm sometime. — The (Marshall) Democrat News

BROOKFIELD SCHOOL CUTS ACTIVITIES

The large Brookfield school last week joined a long procession of other school districts in Missouri that are either closing or cutting down on activities because of a lack of funds with which to operate.

In addition to cutting out all extra-curricular activites, the school board said it is discontinuing drivers education, kindergarten, an assistant principal's position, a vocal music teacher, an instrumental music teacher, a junior high guidance counselor, a high school English teacher and all teacher's aids. Salaries of teachers were increased from a base of $7,700 to $8,200.

The cut-backs followed failure to pass an increased tax levy. Probably none of us are eager to pay more taxes, but if we are to continue to invest in our most valuable product -- children and their education -- we may as well adjust to the fact and vote more money for schools.

Paris did. For this we are grateful.

Memo to Karl Marx:
Miners and Hard Hats heading for $650 weekly wage-benefit income

NEW YORK — Just to discomfit those neo-Marxists, now de-winterizing their communes, I want to report that the proletarians known as operating engineers in White Plains (N.Y.) recently won a $127.60 raise per man per week in wages, with some mighty fine fringes on top.

Thus for a 40-hour-week the new rate will be $690.40. This is for 1977. There will be more in 1978. And just so no one pictures me as a provincial, there is, word from Murphysboro, Ill., that the new pipefitters weekly rate there is $520 in wages and fringes. Actually the average national construction industry union wage-benefit cost per employee is $11.60 an hour or $464 weekly. True, these are average figures. But the hard-hat working class is doing well and will do better as construction picks up.

There hasn't been much heavy coverage on this front though we're in the peak labor-management negotiating season. Except for a strike or two in Akron, Ohio, and Kansas City it's all been "peaceful." So the big black type isn't broken out.

But behind those closed hotel room doors in Washington, where Glenn Watts's telephone workers (CWA) have been coordinating with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in a confrontation with the Bell System over wage-fringe hikes for almost 700,000 AT&T employes, and in some five Miami hotels where the steel union is bargaining with the basic metals corporations and in more secluded eye-balling in a series of other fields, changes in American's life styles are on the table.

Union demands now are ranging all the way from guarantees of a lifetime job to company establishment of alcohol rehabilitation centers.

There's no predicting, for example, what may come out of the current United Steelworkers (USWA) negotiations with the big aluminum companies. Some contracts ago they set precedent for cost of living adjustment for pensions of retirees.

Now this section of the USWA is pounding the table for some sort of lifetime job security -- which the union couldn't win from the Big Ten steel corporations last month. The aluminum industry has been accused by its peers of being "soft."

So there may well come some sort of Japanese-type job-for-life formula when the bargaining room doors are opened.

There's also a union demand for a nickel-an-hour increase for every one point jump in the Consumer Price Index. This once was a two-and-a-half-cents hike in most industries. Then three and a third pennies an hour. A nickel-an-hour cost-of-living adjustment could put an additional $100 a week into the pay envelope during a three-year contract -- atop the regular wage increase.

Thus we now see the Communication Workers of America demanding cost of living adjustment on retirees' pensions, job security, upgrading of jobs traditionally held by women and a substantial wage increase. The numbers are big here. Everything gets multiplied by 700,000. So the Bell System is hanging in tough.

The CWA-AT&T contract expires Aug. 6. And I've heard union president Glenn Watts say that if there's no agreement that night there will be a national phone strike the morning of Aug. 7.

Watts is counting on a long one -- during which the new competition to AT&T, from independents in many fields such as repair and data processing, etc., will pressure "Ma Bell." Of course, the CWA counts on breakdowns in the super-sophisticated telephone company technology. This one could go any direction -- including the White House. There, Watts has friends.

Earlier this year, Vice President Walter Mondale wished the union mighty good luck during a visit of a CWA committee to his suite in the Old Executive Office Bulding. And President Carter isn't forgetting his early-on-the-campaign-train friends.

As for other quietly tense bargaining arenas, there are negotiations in the men's and boys' tailored clothing field. There the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers' Union is seeking substantial pay hikes for 80,000 members -- and a common front with the manufacturers against imports.

And the rail unions have served notice on the big lines. Their new contract demands include such items as health coverage for employes and their dependents until the age of 65-- which could mean brothers, mothers, sisters and adult children, et al. Also up to 80 per cent of dental costs.

The East and Gulf Coast longshoremen (ILA) are toughening their demands with a bid for an $80-a-week increase in negotiations for a new contract replacing the one expiring Sept. 30. The longshoremen already have lifetime job guarantees.

And there are the ever-darkening chaotic coal negotiations involving 125,000 miners who now get $100 a day in wages and fringes. Energy demand being what it is -- wage-fringe cost would go to over $600 a week per coaldigger.

Someone should revise Karl Marx's "Das Kapital." There's nothing petty about the bourgeoisie.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

NO END FOR FOREIGH AID

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

The big-spending liberals are sounding off with their annual regrets about the defects of foreign aid. So what else is new! They will end up voting for it, as they always do.

Hubert Humphrey calls foreign aid "an administrative nightmare." President Carter refers to its "mismanagement and inefficiency." Foreign aid boss John J. Gilligan, former governor of Ohio, says, mea culpa, mea culpa, we have "more chiefs than braves" in the agency.

Nobody enthusiastically defends foreign aid anymore but it is still holding steady at its annual level of $6 billion.

Despite all the regrets, you can bet it will be approved again this year.

The U.S. foreign giveaway program since World War II has cost the American taxpayers well over $200 billion, which is almost half the public debt. This is the equivalent of the assessed valuation of all U.S. cities with a population of 100,000 or more. The United States has given foreign aid to 121 of the 130 nations in the world and to 99 per cent of the world's population.

Foreign aid, including interest on the money the federal government borrows to give away, is a major cause of the high taxes we pay. Foreign aid is also a major cause of high prices because it annually takes billions of dollars worth of goods out of the U.S. economy without a corresponding reduction in local purchasing power.

Foreign aid has wiped out thousands of American jobs. For 30 years, various foreign aid agencies and programs have given foreign countries our most modern machinery and equipment, and foreign aid dollars have brought foreign technicians to America to study and take home our latest technology.

With low-cost foreign labor, with taxes only a small fraction of ours and with ultramodern U.S. machinery and technology provided free by the United States, foreign industry has been able to undersell much of our domestic production.

Why does America continue, year after year, to dole out our hard-earned American dollars when we need this money so badly at home for so many projects and to give relief to our hard-pressed taxpayers?

We are told that foreign aid is designed for our own security. Yet, America is far less secure today than before foreign aid began. We used to be told that the objective of foreign aid was to stop Communist aggression. That isn't a very persuasive argument since five new countries have fallen to communism in the last several years. Many billions of our foreign giveaways even have gone directly to the Soviet Union and other Communist governments.

For 30 years, U.S. foreign aid has been generously dispensed to friend and foe, to good credit risks and to deadbeats, to governments that are polite to us and to governments that insult us and vote against us in the United Nations.

Now North Vietnam is demanding more than $2 billion in foreign aid supposedly promised by President Nixon.

With our foreign handout record, it is no wonder that North Vietnam is optimistic about climbing aboard the gravy train, too.

Although nearly every other Communist country in the world has, at some time, received American aid, Congress should decisively reject aid to North Vietnam which still refuses to account for our servicemen missing in action.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Tip O'Neill Scores High Marks

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill, the great grizzly bear of the House, loomed massively behind the marble rostrum. He surveyed the House floor with an imperious eye and rapped his gavel for order. Then he slumped into his throne-like leather chair and, with studied detachment, began leafing through the House calendar.

On the floor below, an Alabama congressman whispered to a colleague, indicating the Speaker: "He's a good ol' boy." a Boston politician.

During his first four months as Speaker, the bear-hugging, back-slapping he has also emerged as the second most powerful man in Washington.

He is too much of a Boston politician to behave otherwise. His natural environment is a smoke-filled backroom. He enthusiastically contributes to the pollution by blowing out great billows of cigar smoke. His massive bulk always dominates the room, with his lion's mane of white hair the most visible landmark through the smog.

Tip O'Neill is Democrat, Catholic and Irish in that order. He is a tower of affability, full of goodwill and Irish songs. Yet this genial friend of the people has an inner toughness tempered by the rough-and-tumble of Boston politics.

We have talked to two dozen congressional leaders about their new Speaker. To encourage candor, we promised not to identify them. Almost to a man, they praised O'Neill as a strong leader who has taken full charge of the House.

But they had their criticisms, which our reporters, Marc Smolonsky and Jack Mitchell, took up with him during a lengthy interview.

Perhaps the Speaker's greatest weakness, in the opinion of his House colleagues, is that he's too parochial. He is inclined, they say, to put Boston ahead of the nation. "Tip hasn't shown that he can rise above local issues," one colleague put it.

O'Neill shrugged off the criticism. "Every Member of Congress looks out for the economic interests of his home district," he snorted. "But," he insisted, "I'm a national legislator and always have been."

Others complained about O'Neill's political style. "He'll never escape the vestiges of his Boston political background," said one congressman. The Speaker conceded that the characterization was accurate but claimed his Boston political training was his greatest strength.

"I'm a door-opener," he said. "That's my life-style." His backroom manner, his ability to strike a deal, his give-and-take operation -- these were the secrets of his success, he said.

Despite O'Neill's long legislative experience going back 41 years to the Massachusetts legislature, several congressmen agreed that he doesn't have a strong grasp of the issues. "He's more of a politician than a tactician," explained a Midwestern congressman.

The Speaker conceded that he isn't a "floor legislator" and that he relies upon colleagues with a better technical command of complex legislation. "But," he said, "I'll take to the floor when I have to."

Other House Members accused O'Neill of not being assertive enough at the White House. They charged that he began pushing the president's energy program even before it reached Congress. "Not true," retorted Tip. He began boosting an energy program, he said, before Carter became president.

There have been contrary reports in the press that the Speaker has been overbearing at the White House, that he doesn't get along with the president. O'Neill confessed he had turned down several invitations to dine with Carter at the White House. The Speaker said that he had intended no offense but that White House aides apparently had been upset. He attributed the press reports to them.

He said he actually had "great affection" for Carter. "We're part of the same team, and I'm a team player." As long as Carter is the "leader of our party," said O'Neill, "He's the man I'm going to work with."

Other Democratic colleagues accused the Speaker of being overly accomodating in order not to offend any political faction. "I'm a listener," he replied affably. "That's one of my virtues." But, he cautioned, "I know how to be firm without vaccillating."

There were several complaints about committee assignments. One congressman griped over the appointment of Rep. Thomas "Lud" Ashley, D.-Ohio, as chairman of the new House Energy Committee. "Ashley knows nothing about energy," the legislator grumped.

O'Neill said he wanted a chairman who wouldn't fight for regional energy interests. "I chose Lud Ashley purposely," the Speaker explained. "Everybody defends his own energy interests. I wanted to get away from parochialism. Ashley has no reputation as a parochial energy fighter."

Other congressmen complained that O'Neill permitted too many legislators to choose their own committee assignments. This practice originally left the Judiciary Committee short of members. There was nothing wrong, O'Neill contended, with letting senior members choose their commiitee preferences.

Despite the criticism, his House colleagues gave Speaker O'Neill a good report card. Most thought he had developed into an effective Speaker. One put it even stronger. "Tip has the potential," he said, "to become the best Speaker we've ever had."

Today's news in brief

Blue law issue to go to voters

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Voters in metropolitan Kansas City will have the opportunity this fall to decide whether to repeal the controversial ban on Sunday sales.

Gov. Joseph Teasdale said late Tuesday that he will sign into law the limited local-option repeal measure that cleared the Missouri Legislature earlier in the day.

The House, after endorsing a minor change added to the bill by the Senate, gave its approval for the second time to the bill on a 91-59 vote with no debate.

Under the proposal, voters in Jackson, Clay and Platte Counties will be able to decide whtether the ban should be discontinued there and sale of all merchandise permitted on Sudnay. Local officials would could schedule that election anytime after Sept. 28.

For only two of the last 154 years has any area of the state been without a ban on Sunday sales, and some officials see the bill passed Tuesday as an experiment for whether the local-option repeal should be extended to other areas of the state.

Teasdale to join base appeal

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Joseph Teasdale has conceded that Missouri has lost the initial decision to retain the Air Force Communications Service Headquarters at Richards+Gebaur Air Force Base in Kansas City.

But following the announcement of the military's decision to move the operation and its 3,700 employes to Scott Air Base in Illinois, Teasdale said Tuesday he would join the state's congressional delegation and Kansas City officials in appealing that decision to President Carter.

"Richards+Gebaur is an excellent facility that should be utilized effectively," the governor said in a statement. "However, apparently the Air Force has not considered any alternative options other than to transfer the communications service."

Should the appeal of the transfer be unsuccessful, Teasdale said he hoped state officials could persuade the President and Defense Secretary Harold Brown to relocate some other military function at the suburban Grandview base. The Army has announced tentative plans to locate an 800-man reserve center there.

Search nabs woman suspect

ATLANTA (AP) — FBI agents plan today to ask for a warrant to search the mobile home of a woman taken into custody Tuesday, the sixth person arrested in connection with the million dollar robbery and slaying of Indianapolis heiress Marjorie Jackson.

Robertina Harroll, 53, of Ringgold, Ga., was arrested at the Ponderosa Camp Park about 25 miles northwest of here. She was to be arraigned today in U.S. District Court in Atlanta on a charge of receiving stolen currency in excess of $5,000, the FBI said.

Mrs. Harroll's apprehension ended a nationwide police search for her and her 10-yearold son, Timmy. Reports said she could have as much as $1 million in her possession.

The hunt for Mrs. Harroll began in Arizona, where her sister, Marjorie Pollitt, 49, and Howard Willard, 38, both of Indiana, were arrested Friday. Police had been tipped when the pair tried to buy a mobile home for $35,000 in cash.

Reassigned general testifies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The general whom President Carter reassigned for criticizing administration policy on Korea testified today that North Korea is building upon its might and he is convinced Carter's plan to withdraw U.S. ground forces would lead to war.

Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, whom Carter fired as chief of staff of U.S. forces in Korea for criticizing the withdrawal plan, told a House Armed Services subcommittee his fear of war is based on new intelligence of the North Korean buildup.

U.S. intelligence discovered this year that the North Koreans have increased their number of tanks from 500 to 2,-000 over the past four or five years, the general testified.

The general, who is awaiting reassignment by the Army, said that is in addition to the North Korean increase in combat ships and jet fighters that has already been publicly reported. Contradicting a Congressional Budget Office study, Singlaub testified that North Korea's military power is superior to South Korea's now, even with the U.S. forces there.

Eric Sevareid to retire

LOS ANGLELES (AP) — Eric Sevareid, CBS News' granite-faced pundit-in-residence, will soon hang up his thinking cap and reach for his fishing rod. Sevareid will deliver the last of his pithy commentaries on the CBS Evening News on Nov. 30 when he reaches mandatory retirement age of 65. Sevareid was born in Velva, N.D., on Nov. 26, 1912.

Fahd told of U.S. views

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says he has told Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia that the United States is deeply committed to the security and peaceful existence of Israel and that the Arabs "understand this very well." Thanking Carter for a "realistic view and increased understanding" of the Middle East, Fahd said Tuesday night that the greatest hindrance to stability in the region is the "displacement, destitution and expulsion" of the Palestinians.

Nixon to review Agnew case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon, who fought his own accusers to the brink of impeachment, says he never had much hope that his vice president could survive the charges that finally pushed him from office in disgrace. In the fourth of his interviews by television personality David Frost, to be aired tonight, Nixon says that when he learned of the Justice Department's case in 1973 against Spiro T. Agnew, "There wasn't any question ... that he was frankly going to get it."

Dutch voters go to polls

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — The Dutch voted today in parliamentary elections that focused on unemployment and inflation although the campaign has been overshadowed by terrorist takeovers of a school and a train in the north of the country. About 80 per cent of the record 9.5 million eligible voters were expected to vote in the nation's first general election since November 1972.

Soviet shakeup viewed lightly

MOSCOW (AP) — President Nikolai V. Podgorny's ouster from the Communist party's ruling Politburo is the first major shakeup in Kremlin leadership since Premier Nikiita S. Khrushchev was ousted 13 years ago. But its effect on the Soviet people and government policy appears to be slight. "He doesn't appear to have had a major impact on policy in the past, and I don't see that his absence will have a major impact," a Western diplomatic observer said.

Today's news in brief

Blue law issue to go to voters

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Voters in metropolitan Kansas City will have the opportunity this fall to decide whether to repeal the controversial ban on Sunday sales.

Gov. Joseph Teasdale said late Tuesday that he will sign into law the limited local-option repeal measure that cleared the Missouri Legislature earlier in the day.

The House, after endorsing a minor change added to the bill by the Senate, gave its approval for the second time to the bill on a 91-59 vote with no debate.

Under the proposal, voters in Jackson, Clay and Platte Counties will be able to decide whtether the ban should be discontinued there and sale of all merchandise permitted on Sudnay. Local officials would could schedule that election anytime after Sept. 28.

For only two of the last 154 years has any area of the state been without a ban on Sunday sales, and some officials see the bill passed Tuesday as an experiment for whether the local-option repeal should be extended to other areas of the state.

Teasdale to join base appeal

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Joseph Teasdale has conceded that Missouri has lost the initial decision to retain the Air Force Communications Service Headquarters at Richards+Gebaur Air Force Base in Kansas City.

But following the announcement of the military's decision to move the operation and its 3,700 employes to Scott Air Base in Illinois, Teasdale said Tuesday he would join the state's congressional delegation and Kansas City officials in appealing that decision to President Carter.

"Richards+Gebaur is an excellent facility that should be utilized effectively," the governor said in a statement. "However, apparently the Air Force has not considered any alternative options other than to transfer the communications service."

Should the appeal of the transfer be unsuccessful, Teasdale said he hoped state officials could persuade the President and Defense Secretary Harold Brown to relocate some other military function at the suburban Grandview base. The Army has announced tentative plans to locate an 800-man reserve center there.

Search nabs woman suspect

ATLANTA (AP) — FBI agents plan today to ask for a warrant to search the mobile home of a woman taken into custody Tuesday, the sixth person arrested in connection with the million dollar robbery and slaying of Indianapolis heiress Marjorie Jackson.

Robertina Harroll, 53, of Ringgold, Ga., was arrested at the Ponderosa Camp Park about 25 miles northwest of here. She was to be arraigned today in U.S. District Court in Atlanta on a charge of receiving stolen currency in excess of $5,000, the FBI said.

Mrs. Harroll's apprehension ended a nationwide police search for her and her 10-yearold son, Timmy. Reports said she could have as much as $1 million in her possession.

The hunt for Mrs. Harroll began in Arizona, where her sister, Marjorie Pollitt, 49, and Howard Willard, 38, both of Indiana, were arrested Friday. Police had been tipped when the pair tried to buy a mobile home for $35,000 in cash.

Reassigned general testifies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The general whom President Carter reassigned for criticizing adminisration policy on Korea testified today that North Korea is building upon its might and he is convinced Carter's plan to withdraw U.S. ground forces would lead to war.

Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, whom Carter fired as chief of staff of U.S. forces in Korea for criticizing the withdrawal plan, told a House Armed Services subcommittee his fear of war is based on new intelligence of the North Korean buildup.

U.S. intelligence discovered this year that the North Koreans have increased their number of tanks from 500 to 2,-000 over the past four or five years, the general testified.

The general, who is awaiting reassignment by the Army, said that is in addition to the North Korean increase in combat ships and jet fighters that has already been publicly reported. Contradicting a Congressional Budget Office study, Singlaub testified that North Korea's military power is superior to South Korea's now, even with the U.S. forces there.

Tax cuts to mean fatter paychecks for 46 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 46 million workers will find their paychecks a little fatter next month, the result of the new tax cuts that begin June 1.

The average reduction in weekly withholding tax will be $2.13.

A family of four earning $10,000 will pay $200 less in federal income taxes a year, a drop of about 30 per cent. At $15,000, the tax reduction will be $111 a year.

President Carter, in signing the tax cuts into law Monday, called them "a very great benefit to the American average family." He said 80 per cent of the estimated $5 billion in tax cuts will go to people earning less than $15,000 annually.

The reductions, a key part of the economic program Carter proposed shortly after taking office, will benefit only taxpayers who claim the standard deduction when filing their tax returns. Taxpayers who itemize will not be helped.

The new standard deductions are $3,200 for married couples filing a joint return and $2,200 for single persons and heads of households. The old standard deductions ranged from $2,100 to $2,800 for couples and $1,700 to $2,400 for single persons and household heads.

The new law will, however, raise weekly withholding about $1 for 2.2 million single Americans who earn more than $13,750 and claim the standard deduction.

There are several other benefits to the tax cut legislation. By standardizing the deduction, about 3.3 million low-income families won't have to pay income taxes.

The law makes it advantageous for 6.7 million taxpayers who had itemized deductions to use the standard deduction.

And the new law extends temporary tax reductions voted in past congressional sessions, including lower corporate taxes, the $35 per person tax credit and the earned income credit.

The total amount of tax help, including the extensions of past reductions, is estimated at $34.1 billion over the 28-month period ending Dec. 21, 1978.

The bill contains simplified procedures for computing tax liability for nearly all taxpayers. The entire package is retroactive to the start of 1977.

The law also contains a tax credit for businesses to enlarge their work forces.

Education a paying proposition in Granby

GRANBY, Mo. (AP) — Students—young and old—in an adult basic education class here are finding out that education is a paying proposition in more ways than one.

Through the cooperation of local businessmen, students enrolled in the night course at Granby get discounts on haircuts, groceries, hardware and newspapers. They can even get a free car wash.

"As far as I can find out, this has not been done anywhere in the State of Missouri," says D.L. White, principal of Granby Elementary School, who teaches the class of 25 students twice a week. "The town is behind the students in this program and they want them to know it."

As a special incentive, the businessmen are contributing prizes for the best class attendance and highest score on the high school equivalency test.

"The project is good for students because it demonstrates that someone cares about them," said White, who added that merchants also will benefit in the long run if the students get better payinv jobs.

White said he enlisted the support of the businessmen because he felt the extra incentives might be needed to encourage adults with job and family responsibilities. His students range in age from 16 to 69.

Most of the students in his class are housewives. He tells the story of one former student, a 51-year-old woman, who supported herself by cutting firewood with a chain saw and selling it.

Meaty Things to write for American cooks know less about variety meats and how to prepare them than anything else in the meat case. In fact, many a shopper might ask, "What are variety meats?"

You're probably familiar with liver, and may consider it a favorite food. And you've probably sampled tongue and heart. These are three of the variety meats, but there are more. Heart, kidney, sweetbreads, brains and tripe also come under the variety meat umbrella and all provide good eating.

Actually, variety meats are among the most nutritious meat cuts the retailer has to offer. This is especially true of liver which is important for the iron, vitamin A, riboflavin and niacin it provides. Liver is even an important source of ascorbic acid (vitamin C).

Unfortunately, too many shoppers pass up variety meats simply because they don't know what to do with them.

To assist cooks in taking advantage of this nutritional bonanza, the National Live Stock and Meat Board has published an attractive 12-page folder—"Recipes for Variety Meats." In addition to a complete description of each and a guide for buying and preparing them, the folder is packed with 22 kitchen-tested recipes.

You can obtain this valuable folder simply by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to "Variety Meats," Box 11168, Dept. CTC, Home Economics, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Tax cuts to mean fatter paychecks for 46 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 46 million workers will find their paychecks a little fatter next month, the result of the new tax cuts that begin June 1.

The average reduction in weekly withholding tax will be $2.13.

A family of four earning $10,000 will pay $200 less in federal income taxes a year, a drop of about 30 per cent. At $15,000, the tax reduction will be $111 a year.

President Carter, in signing the tax cuts into law Monday, called them "a very great benefit to the American average family." He said 80 per cent of the estimated $5 billion in tax cuts will go to people earning less than $15,000 annually.

The reductions, a key part of the economic program Carter proposed shortly after taking office, will benefit only taxpayers who claim the standard deduction when filing their tax returns. Taxpayers who itemize will not be helped.

The new standard deductions are $3,200 for married couples filing a joint return and $2,200 for single persons and heads of households. The old standard deductions ranged from $2,100 to $2,800 for couples and $1,700 to $2,400 for single persons and household heads.

The new law will, however, raise weekly withholding about $1 for 2.2 million single Americans who earn more than $13,750 and claim the standard deduction.

There are several other benefits to the tax cut legislation. By standardizing the deduction, about 3.3 million low-income families won't have to pay income taxes.

The law makes it advantageous for 6.7 million taxpayers who had itemized deductions to use the standard deduction.

And the new law extends temporary tax reductions voted in past congressional sessions, including lower corporate taxes, the $35 per person tax credit and the earned income credit.

The total amount of tax help, including the extensions of past reductions, is estimated at $34.1 billion over the 28-month period ending Dec. 21, 1978.

The bill contains simplified procedures for computing tax liability for nearly all taxpayers. The entire package is retroactive to the start of 1977.

The law also contains a tax credit for businesses to enlarge their work forces.

Education a paying proposition in Granby

GRANBY, Mo. (AP) — Students—young and old—in an adult basic education class here are finding out that education is a paying proposition in more ways than one.

Through the cooperation of local businessmen, students enrolled in the night course at Granby get discounts on haircuts, groceries, hardware and newspapers. They can even get a free car wash.

"As far as I can find out, this has not been done anywhere in the State of Missouri," says D.L. White, principal of Granby Elementary School, who teaches the class of 25 students twice a week. "The town is behind the students in this program and they want them to know it."

As a special incentive, the businessmen are contributing prizes for the best class attendance and highest score on the high school equivalency test.

"The project is good for students because it demonstrates that someone cares about them," said White, who added that merchants also will benefit in the long run if the students get better payinv jobs.

White said he enlisted the support of the businessmen because he felt the extra incentives might be needed to encourage adults with job and family responsibilities. His students range in age from 16 to 69.

Most of the students in his class are housewives. He tells the story of one former student, a 51-year-old woman, who supported herself by cutting firewood with a chain saw and selling it.

Rapp's team is "over the hump"

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Manager Vern Rapp feels his Cardinals are "over the hump."

The rookie manager, challenged recently for his iron-fisted control, was beaming Tuesday night after the Cardinals ended a brief slump by belting the Philadelphia Phillies 8-5.

Righthander Bob Forsch became the National League's first seven-game winner in the process.

"I'll admit the team was down a little (after dropping three of four games to San Francisco)," said the Cardinals pilot, but he added that he noticed a remarkable difference in the clubhouse before the game.

"I knew we were up before the game started," Rapp said. "Some of the guys got to the park as early as 4 p.m. and the pitchers don't even begin practicing until 5.

"The guys were loose. They were having fun...singing. I thought we'd win the game. It was a hell of a win."

Rapp said he felt the sagging spirit prior to the game was caused by the team's failure to score runs. He discounted the furor surrounding his suspendion of star relief pitcher Al Hrabosky.

"Guys get down when they're losing. It's that simple," he said. "I don't think any of that other stuff had anything to do with it. It's all forgotten now and I believe we're over the hump."

Forsch was modest after boosting his record to 7-1. Asked about his chances for a 20-victory season, he said, "Right now I'm shooting for eight."

Forsch, who didn't win his eighth game last season until Sept. 18, said his early success may be the result of a weightlifting program to strengthen his right arm.

"Right now I'm throwing pretty good and I have to believe (weightlifting) has caused it," he said.

Meanwhile, in the other clubhouse, Phillies Manager Danny Ozark held a closed-door meeting.

Ozark had little to cheer about after his defending National League Eastern Division champions dipped to 19-18.

The one bright note was the savage hitting of Greg Luzinski. The "Bull" belted a pair of two-run homers and smacked a single to drive in all five Philadelphia runs. Luzinksi now has hit safely in 12 straight games, batting .383 in that stretch.

The Cards broke open a 1-1 tie with a five-run fifth inning burst that came after first baseman Richie Hebner was unable to track down a foul pop that bounced near the Cardinal bullpen.

Instead of the third out of the inning, the Cardinals got a reprieve and made the most of it.

Tony Scott, who lifted the foul ball, was hit by a pitch thrown by loser Jim Kaat, 0-2, putting two Cardinals on base.

Garry Templeton followed with an RBI single and then Hector Cruz socked a two-run triple.

Ted Simmons drew an intentional walk, Keith Hernandez singled for another run and Ken Reitz greeted reliever Warren Brusstar with another RBI single.

Navratilova at home in US

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

For Martina Navratilova, it's great to be young and a Yankes.

The Czeck defector has taken to the American way of life as easily as one, two, three — or 15, 30, 40 as it's known in tennis circles.

"I'm Americanized. I got used to the easeway of life here. That's not really too tough to do," said the friendly Miss Navratilova, who now laughs about the time there was a toilet paper shortage in her native Czechoslovakia.

Martina also has gotten acclimated to the new concept of World Team Tennis, starring for the Boston Lobsters. She leads the league in doubles and is second in both singles and totoal offense this season.

Tonight the first-place Lobsters will be in Cleveland to meet Martina's old team, the Nets. But wherever she is — her Boston apartment, her Dallas house or on the road — Martina feels quite at home in the United States

If Mark Twain doesn't mind, we'll just call her a Czechoslovakian Yankee in King Larry's court. (Larry King is a founding father of WTT.)

"Sometimes I'm just amazed how well she fits in," says Marcia Young, the team's publicist. "Coach (Roy) Emerson has nicknamed her the 'Professor of English' because she's always doing crossword puzzles.

"One day we were naming the capitals of the states, and she did better than I did."

Miss Navratilova, 20, defected from her native Czechoslovakia during the 1975 U.S. Open. She says she hopes to become an American citizen by the end of the month, bypassing the normal five-year waiting period.

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., submitted a bill last week asking for accelerated citizenship for Miss Navratilova, who hopes to play for the U.S. team in the Federation and Wightman ups.

"I hope it (citizenship) happens soon," Miss Navratilova said by phone from Boston. "The Federation Cup is the week before Wimbledon (June 13-18). I'd be very proud to be on the same team as Chris (Evert), Rosie (Casals) and Billie Jean (King).

"If we win, I would be the first person to win the Federation Cup for two different countries," said Martina, who led Czechoslovakia to victory in 1975.

Thoughts of her homeland and her family do get her down every once in while, she admits. Martina left behind her father, mother and 14-year-old sister.

"Always deep down, I'll be a Czech," she said. "I miss my family very much. I haven't seen them since 1975. I call home whenever I can. But we can't always talk too freely. Whenever we start to talk about something hairy, a lot of static interferes with the line."

Martina, the No. 2-ranked player in the world, speaks with a slight accent but has no trouble understanding what people say. "I even understand the jokes now," she said.

Will Grimsley is on vacation.

Walther declines to drive at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bill Puterbaugh is back in Sunday's Indianapolis 500-mile race after Salt Walther turned down a chance to drive the car his father purchased after Puterbaugh qualified it.

Walther was bumped from the field because his car was too slow and he was unable to qualify a backup auto.

"I had nothing to do with the whole thing," Walter said Tuesday night. "I appreciate the thoughtfulness of my father and brother to purchase the Elkins car for me, but I thought about it all night and if I took the ride away from Bill, I would lose respect for myself.

"I figured the only fair thing to do was to turn the car over to Bill and help him in any way I can to make our car successful in the 500."

Walther's father, George, and brother, Jeff, bought the Eagle Monday that Puterbaugh qualified Sunday in 28th place. They purchased it from Lee Elkins, ailing Kalamazoo, Mich., sportsman who said he no longer was physically capable of "running the team right."

George and Jeff Walther then announced Salt would replace Puterbaugh.

Ailing Busby hurting again

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Royals announced they will take Andy Hassler, their big left-handed pitcher, off the disabled list Wednesday, and do some maneuvering with Tom Hall, veteran relief pitcher.

Steve Busby, the baseball club's leading pitcher when he was hit on the pitching elbow by a line drive in August of 1975, was headed for a new checkup in Los Angeles with the specalist who operated on him when the elbow injury evolved into a stiff shoulder.

Hassler was placed on the 15-day disabled list on April 27 after a line drive off the bat of Ken Henderson of the Texas Rangers hit the inside of his right knee.

Rapp's team is "over the hump"

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Manager Vern Rapp feels his Cardinals are "over the hump."

The rookie manager, challenged recently for his iron-fisted control, was beaming Tuesday night after the Cardinals ended a brief slump by belting the Philadelphia Phillies 8-5.

Righthander Bob Forsch became the National League's first seven-game winner in the process.

"I'll admit the team was down a little (after dropping three of four games to San Francisco)," said the Cardinals pilot, but he added that he noticed a remarkable difference in the clubhouse before the game.

"I knew we were up before the game started," Rapp said. "Some of the guys got to the park as early as 4 p.m. and the pitchers don't even begin practicing until 5.

"The guys were loose. They were having fun...singing. I thought we'd win the game. It was a hell of a win."

Rapp said he felt the sagging spirit prior to the game was caused by the team's failure to score runs. He discounted the furor surrounding his suspendion of star relief pitcher Al Hrabosky.

"Guys get down when they're losing. It's that simple," he said. "I don't think any of that other stuff had anything to do with it. It's all forgotten now and I believe we're over the hump."

Forsch was modest after boosting his record to 7-1. Asked about his chances for a 20-victory season, he said, "Right now I'm shooting for eight."

Forsch, who didn't win his eighth game last season until Sept. 18, said his early success may be the result of a weight-lifting program to strengthen his right arm.

"Right now I'm throwing pretty good and I have to believe (weightlifting) has caused it," he said.

Meanwhile, in the other clubhouse, Phillies Manager Danny Ozark held a closed-door meeting.

Ozark had little to cheer about after his defending National League Eastern Division champions dipped to 19-18.

The one bright note was the savage hitting of Greg Luzinski. The "Bull" belted a pair of two-run homers and smacked a single to drive in all five Philadelphia runs. Luzinksi now has hit safely in 12 straight games, batting .383 in that stretch.

The Cards broke open a 1-1 tie with a five-run fifth inning burst that came after first baseman Richie Hebner was unable to track down a foul pop that bounced near the Cardinal bullpen.

Instead of the third out of the inning, the Cardinals got a reprieve and made the most of it.

Tony Scott, who lifted the foul ball, was hit by a pitch thrown by loser Jim Kaat, 0-2, putting two Cardinals on base.

Garry Templeton followed with an RBI single and then Hector Cruz socked a two-run triple.

Ted Simmons drew an intentional walk, Keith Hernandez singled for another run and Ken Reitz greeted reliever Warren Brusstar with another RBI single.

Navratilova at home in US

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

For Martina Navratilova, it's great to be young and a Yankee.

The Czeck defector has taken to the American way of life as easily as one, two, three — or 15, 30, 40 as it's known in tennis circles.

"I'm Americanized. I got used to the eas6way of life here. That's not really too tough to do," said the friendly Miss Navratilova, who now laughs about the time there was a toilet paper shortage in her native Czechoslovakia.

Martina also has gotten acclimated to the new concept of World Team Tennis, starring for the Boston Lobsters. She leads the league in doubles and is second in both singles and total offense this season.

Tonight the first-place Lobsters will be in Cleveland to meet Martina's old team, the Nets. But wherever she is — her Boston apartment, her Dallas house or on the road — Martina feels quite at home in the United States

If Mark Twain doesn't mind, we'll just call her a Czechoslovakian Yankee in King Larry's court. (Larry King is a founding father of WTT.)

"Sometimes I'm just amazed how well she fits in," says Marcia Young, the team's publicist. "Coach (Roy) Emerson has nicknamed her the 'Professor of English' because she's always doing crossword puzzles.

"One day we were naming the capitals of the states, and she did better than I did."

Miss Navratilova, 20, defected from her native Czechoslovakia during the 1975 U.S. Open. She says she hopes to become an American citizen by the end of the month, bypassing the normal five-year waiting period.

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., submitted a bill last week asking for accelerated citizenship for Miss Navratilova, who hopes to play for the U.S. team in the Federation and Wightman ups.

"I hope it (citizenship) happens soon," Miss Navratilova said by phone from Boston. "The Federation Cup is the week before Wimbledon (June 13-18). I'd be very proud to be on the same team as Chris (Evert), Rosie (Casals) and Billie Jean (King).

"If we win, I would be the first person to win the Federation Cup for two different countries," said Martina, who led Czechoslovakia to victory in 1975.

Thoughts of her homeland and her family do get her down every once in while, she admits. Martina left behind her father, mother and 14-year-old sister.

"Always deep down, I'll be a Czech," she said. "I miss my family very much. I haven't seen them since 1975. I call home whenever I can. But we can't always talk too freely. Whenever we start to talk about something hairy, a lot of static interferes with the line."

Martina, the No. 2-ranked player in the world, speaks with a slight accent but has no trouble understanding what people say. "I even understand the jokes now," she said.

Will Grimsley is on vacation.

Walther declines to drive at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bill Puterbaugh is back in Sunday's Indianapolis 500-mile race after Salt Walther turned down a chance to drive the car his father purchased after Puterbaugh qualified it.

Walther was bumped from the field because his car was too slow and he was unable to qualify a backup auto.

"I had nothing to do with the whole thing," Walter said Tuesday night. "I appreciate the thoughtfulness of my father and brother to purchase the Elkins car for me, but I thought about it all night and if I took the ride away from Bill, I would lose respect for myself.

"I figured the only fair thing to do was to turn the car over to Bill and help him in any way I can to make our car successful in the 500."

Walther's father, George, and brother, Jeff, bought the Eagle Monday that Puterbaugh qualified Sunday in 28th place. They purchased it from Lee Elkins, ailing Kalamazoo, Mich., sportsman who said he no longer was physically capable of "running the team right."

George and Jeff Walther then announced Salt would replace Puterbaugh.

Ailing Busby hurting again

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Royals announced they will take Andy Hassler, their big left-handed pitcher, off the disabled list Wednesday, and do some maneuvering with Tom Hall, veteran relief pitcher.

Steve Busby, the baseball club's leading pitcher when he was hit on the pitching elbow by a line drive in August of 1975, was headed for a new checkup in Los Angeles with the specalist who operated on him when the elbow injury evolved into a stiff shoulder.

Hassler was placed on the 15-day disabled list on April 27 after a line drive off the bat of Ken Henderson of the Texas Rangers hit the inside of his right knee.

Kromm's hunch leads to Jet romp

WINNIPEG (AP) — Winnipeg Coach Bobby Kromm played a hunch Tuesday night that led to the key goal in the Jets 12-3 romp over the Quebec Nordiques that forced a seventh and deciding game in the World Hockey Association final playoff series.

Kromm sent left wing Bob Hull onto the ice alongside Bobby Guindon and Fran Huck early in the second period, and moments later Hull scored, giving Winnipeg a 5-3 margin.

The e had been close until then, but the Jets took command at that point and scored seven more goals.

"No doubt that was the key goal," said both Kromm and Quebec Coach Marc Boileau.

"I have these hunches at times," said Kromm. "I didn't know Hull was going to score, but then he's always dangerous when he's out there."

The victory evened the best-of-seven series 3-3 and gave the Jets a chance to successfully defend their title Thursday night in Game Seven at Quebec.

"We played our game tonight, we forechecked, skated well and took the man out," said Kromm. "I think the difference was we didn't let J.C. Tremblay get away with those cute moves of his."

The Jets keyed on the veteran Quebec defenseman and so effectively checked Tremblay that he was on the ice for 10 Winnipeg goals. Four of those goals came immediately after Winnipeg players bodied Tremblay and took the puck away from him.

Defense, or the lack of it, led to the seven first-period goals. Quebec's first two goals, by Real Cloutier, came with Winnipeg defensemen caught deep up ice and the third, by Chris Bordeleau, came with the defenseman disorganized and unable to clear the puck.

Winnipeg, meanwhile, offset those errors by stealing the puck three times from Tremblay and scoring. The Jets got a fourth goal on a two-on-one break.

Boileau was ejected for comments he made to referee Bill Friday midway through the third period. Boileau was incensed with the work of Friday, whom he suggested was intimidated by the boisterous Winnipeg crowd.

"He tells my guys they can't talk to him, they can't do anything. It's tough to play our style consistantly with a joker like Friday out there."

Friday issued 13 minor penalties to Quebec and six to Winnipeg. The Jets scored three power play goals.

Big Red "satisfied" with '77 draft

By the time the NFL draft was completed early Wednesday evening, May 4, members of the St. Louis Football Cardinals were:

a.) Happy
b.) Tired
c.) Satisfied
d.) All of the the above

Score yourself a winner if you marked "D" -- all of the above.

The Cardinals' brass selected ten players from the collegiate ranks, seven defensive standouts and three offensive players. Two notable NFL defensive secondary veterans were obtained through the trade of draft rights.

"Those two draft days were very productive for us," Joe Sullivan, The Big Red's Director of Operations, said. "It was not the best year for college seniors, but we think we've got some quality players. Players who could help us this season."

The Cardinals selected a local product in the first round, Missouri quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz, whose home is in Florissant, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis. "We didn't think Pisarkiewicz would be available when we picked," Personnel Director George Boone said. "We thought he'd be one of the first ten players grabbed. We would have been crazy not to take him. You don't bypass a quarterback like 'Zark'. It was an easy choice."

After taking Texas A and I fullback George Franklin in the second round and Penn State linebacker Kurt Allerman in the third, the Cardinals used a second third round pick to select Terdell Middleton, a running back from Memphis State. The Big Red then traded Middleton to the Packers for cornerback Perry Smith, a two-year starter at Green Bay.

St. Louis obtained another veteran when the seventh- round choice was sent to Cleveland for strong safety Neal Craig. "With Smith and Craig, we have people who have played well in the NFL. We know what they can do and we believe they'll make significant Contributions immediately," Sullivan said.

Of the seven defensive collegians selected, four are linebackers. Along with Allerman, the Cardinals picked: Tennessee's Andy Spiva (fifth), Southern Cal's Eric Williams (eighth) and Texas' Tick Fenlaw (12th). Allerman, Spiva and Williams each led his team in tackles.

Ernest Lee, a defensive end from Texas who was selected in the fifth round, had more tackles than any other down lineman at Texas last fall, while ninth round choice John Jackson, a defensive end from Southern, was the leading tackler on his team.

The Cardinals used their tenth pick to grab running specialist Jim LeJay from San Jose State. Greg Lee, a cornerback from Western Illinois, was selected in the 11th round.

Reuss ends a long wait; grabs 1st win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Jerry Reuss took a bath in beer and still came up smelling like a rose.

"Any time you win a ball game, it's a good feeling," said the Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher.

Actually, this was only the first victory in 1977 for Reuss. So the smell of success was even sweeter.

Reuss had an 0-5 record in nine previous starts before beating the New York Mets 5-2 Tuesday night.

His teammates celebrated the occasion by dumping cups of beer on Reuss as he entered the locker room.

"It feels like champagne," said Reuss, then added: "We play 162 games. This had to come sometime."

Reuss was not especially overpowering. He needed relief help in the seventh inning after giving up the Mets' seventh hit and his second walk.

"He didn't look like the Jerry Reuss of old," said loser Jon Matlack, "but I'm glad to see him win a game. Too bad it came at my expense."

Elsewhere in the National League, the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 8-5, the Montreal Expos edged the Chicago Cubs 5-4 in 13 innings, the San Diego Padres nipped the Atlanta Braves 4-3, and the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Houston Astros 4-2.

The Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the second. A bloop double by Rennie Stennett brought home the first run and snapped a string of 19 scoreless innings by Matlack, who had pitched two straight shutouts.

Matlack left the game in the Pirates' three-run fourth, which included run-scoring singles by Phil Garner, Reuss and Omar Moreno. Al Oliver hit a solo homer in the fifth off reliever Bob Myrick.

Cardinals 8, Phillies 5

Hector Cruz sparked a five-run fifth inning with a two-run triple, helping Bob Forsch become the National League's first seven-game winner as St. Louis beat Philadelphia.

Forsch, raising his record to 7-1 with last-inning relief help from Al Hrabosky, allowed six hits through eight innings. Three of the Phillies' hits were by Greg Luzinski, who drove in all of their runs with a single and a pair of two-run homers.

Expos 5, Cubs 4

A pinch single by Jose Morales scored Chris Speier in the 13th inning, giving Montreal its victory over Chicago. It was the second straight triumph for the Expos, who ended an 11-game losing streak Sunday.

Padres 4, Braves 3

Doug Rader drove in three runs with a bases-loaded triple, highlighting a four-run rlly in the fourth inning that carried San Diego over Atlanta.

Rick Sawyer held the Braves to no hits and one unearned run in four innings of relief i. gaining the victory. Rollie Fingers pitched the last inning for San Diego and notched his eighth save of the year.

Dodgers 4, Astros 2

Ron Cey's RBI double in the fifth produced the decisive run as Los Angeles beat Houston. Reliever Charlie Hough secured Rick Rhoden's seventh victory and gained his 12th save of the year.

Cubs build a winner via trades

CHICAGO (AP) — Be they contenders or mere pretenders, the Chicago Cubs are making strong sounds in the National League East. The reason is judicious trading through the years.

To their credit, the Cubs did not pull in their trading horns when they swapped Lou Brock for sore-armed Ernie Broglio in 1964.

Instead, former General Manager John Holland, who now serves in a retired advisory capacity, made a number of helpful trades which were topped last winter by a pair of major transactions by General Manager Bob Kennedy.

"I guess I'll have to go to my grave getting blamed for the Brock deal but ...," and Holland left the sentence hanging.

Holland does not deny that he had a hand in the Brock deal, but in reality it was engineered by Bob Whitlow who at the time was the Cubs' athletic director in charge of the ill-fated College of Rotating Coaches.

Once the athletic director and the college became things of the past, Holland hired Leo Durocher to manage the club, and with a combination of homegrown players — Ernie Banks, Ron Santo, Billy Williams, Glenn Beckert — and players acquired in trades — Fergie Jenkins, Bill Hands, Randy Hundley — the Cubs made a drive for the pennant in 1969 which ended with the infamous September swoon.

The Cubs kept trading and, except for pitching, the entire starting lineup this season along with key reserves was acquired in trades.

Most of the trades were Holland's, but the two of current magnitude involving Rick Monday and Bill Madlock — two of the more popular Cubs last year — were made by Kennedy.

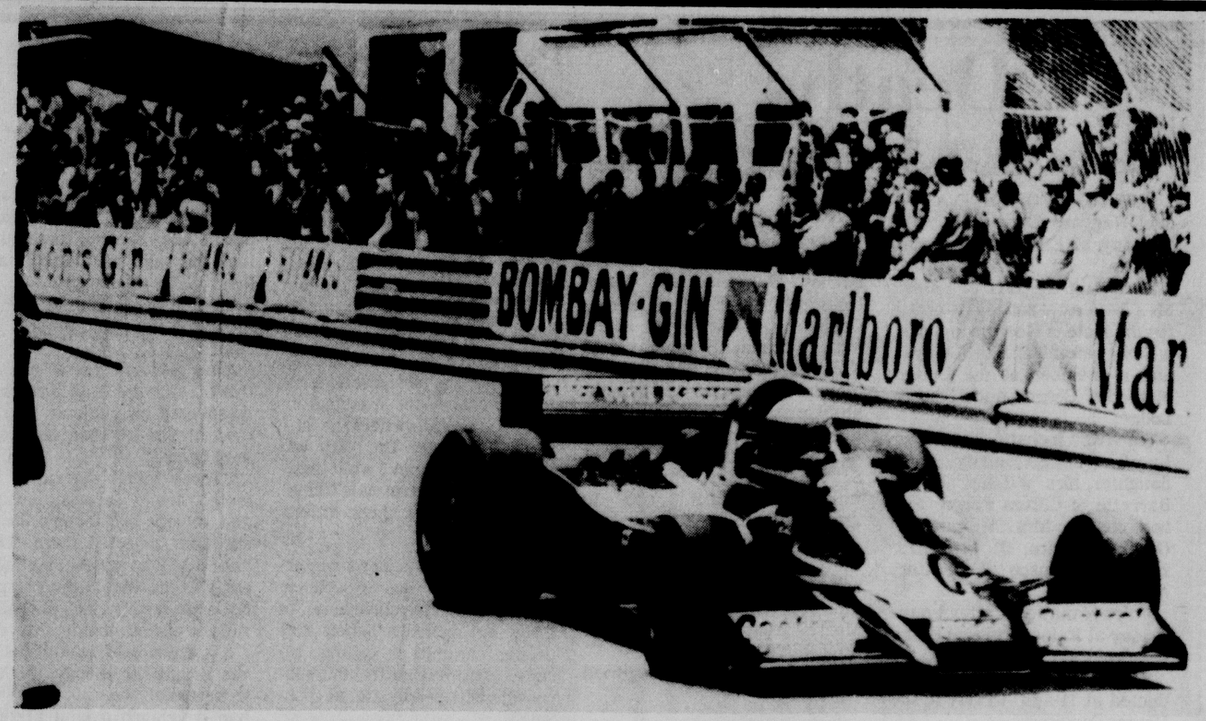
Monday went to the Los Angeles Dodgers for shortstop Ivan DeJesus and first baseman Bill Buckner and Madlock went to San Francisco for outfielder Bobby Murcer and third baseman Steve Ontiveros.

Although Buckner has been hobbled with an ankle that has not responded to surgery, DeJesus has more than justified the Monday deal with fine defensive play and a .324 batting average.

Buckner has a .368 mark in a limited 38 at bats, but Larry Biittner, acquired from Montreal last year, has filled in capably with a .318 average. Murcer and Ontiveros have filled regular positions and both have batted over .300 most of the season.

Holland's big trades go back to 1965 when pitchers Larry Jackson and Bob Buhl went to Philadelphia for Jenkins, Adolfo Phillips and John Herrnstein.

Paul Walker caught this 19-pound string of fish at Max Ellison's lake, near Sikeston.



South Africa's Jody Scheckter drives his Wolf Ford across the finish line to win the formula-one Grand Prix of Monaco last Sunday. Scheckter led the race from start to finish and outdistanced Nikki Lauda of Austria, second, and Carlos Reutmann of Argentina, third. The win increased Scheckter's lead in the world driving championship and gives the Ford-Cosworth engine its 100th Grand Prix victory. (AP Wirephoto)

Special Olympics held last week

FORT LEONARD WOOD, MO - An array of sports events and social activities set the pace for the 1977 Missouri Special Olympics at Ft. Leonard Wood last week. The lighting of the Olympic torch and the Parade of Athletes officially began the ceremonies on Thursday, May 19 at 7 p.m.

During the following two days, about 3500 exceptional individuals and chaperones participated in the games and social activities, designed specifically for the physically, emotionally and mentally handicapped.

Throughout their stay, the Olympians were housed in an Olympic Village of 12 barracks and dined in troop dining facilities.

The competition, which included games such as broad jump, long jump, relays, dashes, swimming and team sports, ended Saturday, May 21, in the afternoon.

In addition to Special Olympics, Armed Forces Day was commemorated at Ft. Wood by the exhibition of static military displays at Nutter Field House and a retreat ceremony performed on Friday at 4:30 p.m. in front of the post headquarters.

Game films show Portland mistakes

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It was not Jack Ramsay's favorite picture, certainly no "Gone With the Wind."

The coach of the Portland Trail Blazers had just gone over the game films of Sunday's 107-101 loss to Philadelphia in the opener of the National Basketball Association championship playoffs, and his review was something less than a rave.

"It's hard to win a game where you make 34 turnovers — our average is about 17," said Ramsay. "We gave them fast break opportunities. We didn't run our offense effectively. We didn't pass the ball crisply. We didn't come to meet the ball with authority. We didn't have steals from our guards in the backcourt."

On and on, Ramsay ticked off the things the Blazers did wrong before finally stumbling onto a silver lining, of sorts.

"The fact that we can play as ineffectively as we did and still be in the game at the end should show something," he suggested.

Indeed, the only Portland player who really played up to par in the opener of the best-of-seven series was Bill Walton, who had 28 points and 20 rebounds. Power forward Maurice Lucas fouled out and was never a dominating force; Bob Gross fouled out chasing after Julius Erving, and starting guards Lionel Hollins and Johnny Davis combined for just 13 points.

"Our game is not predicated on one man playing well," said Ramsay after running the Blazers through a practice session Tuesday. "All five have to play well."

Did he feel Portland had played at 90 per cent of its potential?

"Oh, no, by no means," he replied. "We played way below that. If we had played 90 per cent, we'd have won by 15."

Ramsay said if the Blazers are to even the series by winning Game Two Thursday night, they'll have to contain the Sixers' big guns — Julius Erving, Doug Collins and George McGinnis. He included McGinnis in that group even though the muscular forward has been in the throes of a dismal slump during the playoffs, contributing just eight points — on 3-for-12 shooting — and two rebounds Sunday.

What about the strategic wrinkle put in by Philadelphia Coach Gene Shue of having center Caldwell Jones bring the ball upcourt? That seemed to neutralize the defensive pressure in the backcourt which was so much a factor in the Blazers' semifinal sweep of Los Angeles.

But Ramsay disagreed.

"The fact that they bring up the ball with somebody other than their guards really doesn't affect how we're going to play defense," he said. "Our defense is predicated on stopping their running game and making them play half-court offense. If they're going to bring the ball up with a big player, that's not a factor because it means they're going to have to start their offense even higher."

Shue, however, says he expects the Blazers to make some moves to counteract Jones' role as playmaker.

Kromm's hunch leads to Jet romp

WINNIPEG (AP) — Winnipeg Coach Bobby Kromm played a hunch Tuesday night that led to the key goal in the Jets 12-3 romp over the Quebec Nordiques that forced a seventh and deciding game in the World Hockey Association final playoff series.

Kromm sent left wing Bob Hull onto the ice alongside Bobby Guindon and Fran Huck early in the second period, and moments later Hull scored, giving Winnipeg a 5-3 margin.

The e had been close until then, but the Jets took command at that point and scored seven more goals.

"No doubt that was the key goal," said both Kromm and Quebec Coach Marc Boileau.

"I have these hunches at times," said Kromm. "I didn't know Hull was going to score, but then he's always dangerous when he's out there."

The victory evened the best-of-seven series 3-3 and gave the Jets a chance to successfully defend their title Thursday night in Game Seven at Quebec.

"We played our game tonight, we forechecked, skated well and took the man out," said Kromm. "I think the difference was we didn't let J.C. Tremblay get away with those cute moves of his."

The Jets keyed on the veteran Quebec defenseman and so effectively checked Tremblay that he was on the ice for 10 Winnipeg goals. Four of those goals came immediately after Winnipeg players bodied Tremblay and took the puck away from him.

Defense, or the lack of it, led to the seven first-period goals. Quebec's first two goals, by Real Cloutier, came with Winnipeg defensemen caught deep up ice and the third, by Chris Bordeleau, came with the defenseman disorganized and unable to clear the puck.

Winnipeg, meanwhile, offset those errors by stealing the puck three times from Tremblay and scoring. The Jets got a fourth goal on a two-on-one break.

Boileau was ejected for comments he made to referee Bill Friday midway through the third period. Boileau was incensed with the work of Friday, whom he suggested was intimidated by the boisterous Winnipeg crowd.

"He tells my guys they can't talk to him, they can't do anything. It's tough to play our style consistantly with a joker like Friday out there."

Friday issued 13 minor penalties to Quebec and six to Winnipeg. The Jets scored three power play goals.

Big Red "satisfied" with '77 draft

By the time the NFL draft was completed early Wednesday evening, May 4, members of the St. Louis Football Cardinals were:

a.) Happy
b.) Tired
c.) Satisfied
d.) All of the the above

Score yourselff a winner if you marked "D" -- all of the above.

The Cardinals' brass selected ten players from the collegiate ranks, seven defensive standouts and three offensive players. Two notable NFL defensive secondary veterans were obtained through the trade of draft rights.

"Those two draft days were very productive for us," Joe Sullivan, The Big Red's Director of Operations, said. "It was not the best year for college seniors, but we think we've got some quality players. Players who could help us this season."

The Cardinals selected a local product in the first round, Missouri quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz, whose home is in Florissant, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis. "We didn't think Pisarkiewicz would be available when we picked," Personnel Director George Boone said. "We thought he'd be one of the first ten players grabbed. We would have been crazy not to take him. You don't bypass a quarterback like 'Zark'. It was an easy choice."

After taking Texas A and I fullback George Franklin in the second round and Penn State linebacker Kurt Allerman in the third, the Cardinals used a second third round pick to select Terdell Middleton, a running back from Memphis State. The Big Red then traded Middleton to the Packers for cornerback Perry Smith, a two-year starter at Green Bay.

St. Louis obtained another veteran when the seventh- round choice was sent to Cleveland for strong safety Neal Craig. "With Smith and Craig, we have people who have played well in the NFL. We know what they can do and we believe they'll make significant Contributions immediately," Sullivan said.

Of the seven defensive collegians selected, four are linebackers. Along with Allerman, the Cardinals picked: Tennessee's Andy Spiva (fifth), Southern Cal's Eric Williams (eighth) and Texas' Tick Fenlaw (12th). Allerman, Spiva and Williams each led his team in tackles.

Ernest Lee, a defensive end from Texas who was selected in the fifth round, had more tackles than any other down lineman at Texas last fall, while ninth round choice John Jackson, a defensive end from Southern, was the leading tackler on his team.

The Cardinals used their tenth pick to grab running specialist Jim LeJay from San Jose State. Greg Lee, a cornerback from Western Illinois, was selected in the 11th round.

Cubs build a winner via trades

CHICAGO (AP) — Be they contenders or mere pretenders, the Chicago Cubs are making strong sounds in the National League East. The reason is judicious trading through the years.

To their credit, the Cubs did not pull in their trading horns when they swapped Lou Brock for sore-armed Ernie Broglio in 1964.

Instead, former General Manager John Holland, who now serves in a retired advisory capacity, made a number of helpful trades which were topped last winter by a pair of major transactions by General Manager Bob Kennedy.

"I guess I'll have to go to my grave getting blamed for the Brock deal but ...," and Holland left the sentence hanging.

Holland does not deny that he had a hand in the Brock deal, but in reality it was engineered by Bob Whitlow who at the time was the Cubs' athletic director in charge of the ill-fated College of Rotating Coaches.

Once the athletic director and the college became things of the past, Holland hired Leo Durocher to manage the club, and with a combination of homegrown players — Ernie Banks, Ron Santo, Billy Williams, Glenn Beckert — and players acquired in trades — Fergie Jenkins, Bill Hands, Randy Hundley — the Cubs made a drive for the pennant in 1969 which ended with the infamous September swoon.

The Cubs kept trading and, except for pitching, the entire starting lineup this season along with key reserves was acquired in trades.

Most of the trades were Holland's, but the two of current magnitude involving Rick Monday and Bill Madlock — two of the more popular Cubs last year — were made by Kennedy.

Monday went to the Los Angeles Dodgers for shortstop Ivan DeJesus and first baseman Bill Buckner and Madlock went to San Francisco for outfielder Bobby Murcer and third baseman Steve Ontiveros.

Although Buckner has been hobbled with an ankle that has not responded to surgery, DeJesus has more than justified the Monday deal with fine defensive play and a .324 batting average.

Buckner has a .368 mark in a limited 38 at bats, but Larry Biittner, acquired from Montreal last year, has filled in capably with a .318 average. Murcer and Ontiveros have filled regular positions and both have batted over .300 most of the season.

Holland's big trades go back to 1965 when pitchers Larry Jackson and Bob Buhl went to Philadelphia for Jenkins, Adolfo Phillips and John Herrnstein.

Reuss ends a long wait; grabs 1st win

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Jerry Reuss took a bath in beer and still came up smelling like a rose.

"Any time you win a ball game, it's a good feeling," said the Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher.

Actually, this was only the first victory in 1977 for Reuss. So the smell of success was even sweeter.

Reuss had an 0-5 record in nine previous starts before beating the New York Mets 5-2 Tuesday night.

His teammates celebrated the occasion by dumping cups of beer on Reuss as he entered the locker room.

"It feels like champagne," said Reuss, then added: "We play 162 games. This had to come sometime."

Reuss was not especially overpowering. He needed relief help in the seventh inning after giving up the Mets' seventh hit and his second walk.

"He didn't look like the Jerry Reuss of old," said loser Jon Matlack, "but I'm glad to see him win a game. Too bad it came at my expense."

Elsewhere in the National League, the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 8-5, the Montreal Expos edged the Chicago Cubs 5-4 in 13 innings, the San Diego Padres nipped the Atlanta Braves 4-3, and the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Houston Astros 4-2.

The Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the second. A bloop double by Rennie Stennett brought home the first run and snapped a string of 19 scoreless innings by Matlack, who had pitched two straight shutouts.

Matlack left the game in the Pirates' three-run fourth, which included run-scoring singles by Phil Garner, Reuss and Omar Moreno. Al Oliver hit a solo homer in the fifth off reliever Bob Myrick.

Cardinals 8, Phillies 5

Hector Cruz sparked a five-run fifth inning with a two-run triple, helping Bob Forsch become the National League's first seven-game winner as St. Louis beat Philadelphia.

Forsch, raising his record to 7-1 with last-inning relief help from Al Hrabosky, allowed six hits through eight innings. Three of the Phillies' hits were by Greg Luzinski, who drove in all of their runs with a single and a pair of two-run homers.

Expos 5, Cubs 4

A pinch single by Jose Morales scored Chris Speier in the 13th inning, giving Montreal its victory over Chicago. It was the second straight triumph for the Expos, who ended an 11-game losing streak Sunday.

Padres 4, Braves 3

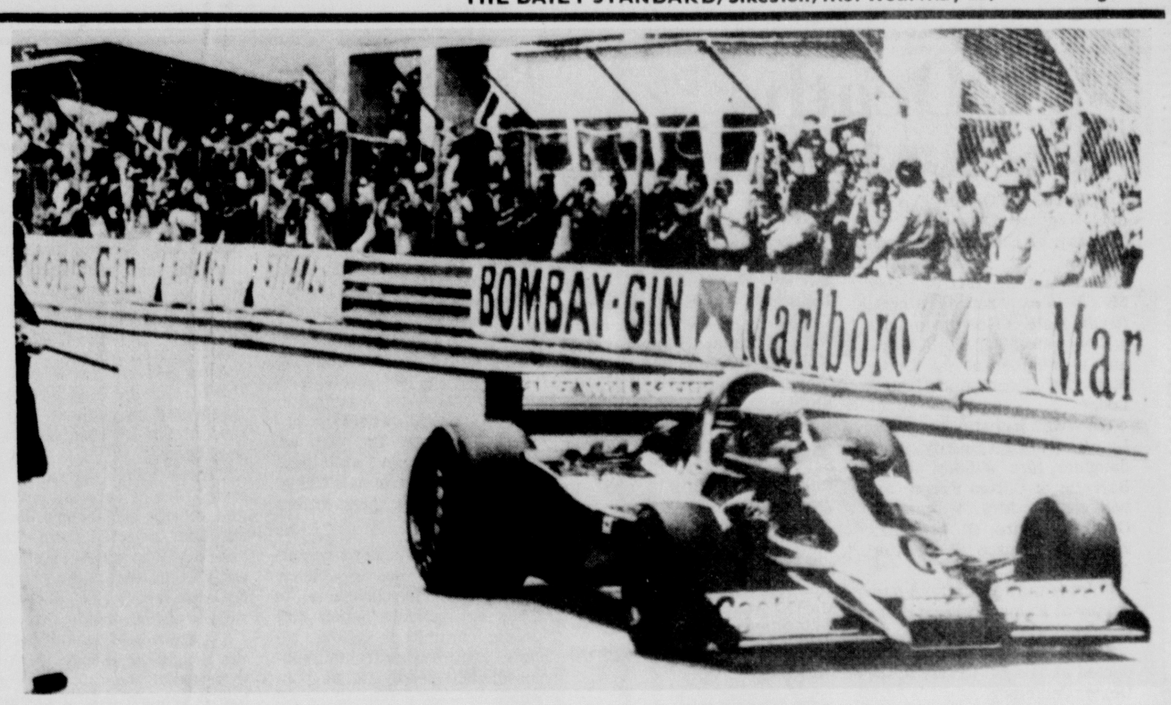
Doug Rader drove in three runs with a bases-loaded triple, highlighting a four-run rlly in the fourth inning that carried San Diego over Atlanta.

Rick Sawyer held the Braves to no hits and one unearned run in four innings of relief i. gaining the victory. Rollie Fingers pitched the last inning for San Diego and notched his eighth save of the year.

Dodgers 4, Astros 2

Ron Cey's RBI double in the fifth produced the decisive run as Los Angeles beat Houston. Reliever Charlie Hough secured Rick Rhoden's seventh victory and gained his 12th save of the year.

Paul Walker caught this 19-pound string of fish at Max Ellison's lake, near Sikeston.



South Africa's Jody Scheckter drives his Wolf Ford across the finish line to win the formula-one Grand Prix of Monaco last Sunday. Scheckter led the race from start to finish and outdistanced Nikki Lauda of Austria, second, and Carlos Reutmann of Argentina, third. The win increased Scheckter's lead in the world driving championship and gives the Ford-Cosworth engine its 100th Grand Prix victory. (AP Wirephoto)

Psychologist reveals new view on criminal behavior

WASHINGTON (AP) — Criminal behavior is not a mental illness and cannot be reversed by giving people education, jobs or money, says a Freudian psychologist involved in an intensive federal study of crime.

Dr. Stanton E. Samenow has worked for the last seven years at a federally run Washington mental hospital, where he assisted the late Dr. Samuel Yochelson in an ambitious study of how criminals think and what makes them different.

Samenow told a news conference Monday the experience caused the psychologists to throw out orthodox beliefs that people committed crimes because they felt guilty and subconsciously needed to be punished.

Since the search for a cause didn't work, the psychologist said, he and Yochelson, who died last November, stopped asking why and began looking at how the criminals thought.

Samenow said he and Yochelson identified 53 separate thinking patterns that each of their 225 hardcore criminals, from white-collar crooks to grade school dropouts, had in common.

Those characteristics included anger, pride, sentimentality, lying, intolerance of fear and procrastination. While many people have some of these qualities, he said, criminals "have them all to an extreme.

"Lying is a way of life to make fools of other people," he said.

After several years of their work, Samenow said, Yochelson discovered his subjects "examined him more than he examined them."

"These men," he said, "rejected their parents, schools and society long before the institutions rejected them. They had made a series of choices early in life that had nothing to do with family, neighborhood, race or socioeconomic factors."

Samenow said he and Yochelson sought to change thinking patterns of the criminals that had developed over a lifetime, and in recent years experienced considerable success.

By intensive retraining of the criminal personality, and by refusing to be fooled by criminals, "change agents" — as Samenow called himself and Yochelson — are able to attain a measure of success.

In the last three years, he said, seven of the 24 hardcore criminals who went through the new treatment have become constructive law-abiding citizens.

Sen. Byrd wants Carter to return chandelier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The matter of the majority leader's chandelier is the latest crisis in relations between Congress and the Carter administration.

Will Jimmy Carter return the 11-foot chandelier Jacqueline Kennedy borrowed from the Senate 15 years ago? Or will he accept the recommendation that the chandelier remain in the White House and risk incurring the displeasure of Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd?

On such a matter might hang the fate of the Carter legislative program.

It seems that former Majority Leader Mike Mansfield agreed to allow Mrs. Kennedy to borrow the chandelier, which was hanging in the Capitol, and install it in the White House. Mrs. Kennedy was redecorating the White House with antiques of historical significance.

The chandelier, one of three bought in 1873 by Ulysses S. Grant, was taken to the White House and now hangs in the Treaty Room on the second floor.

Before he let it be taken from the Capitol, Mansfield stipulated that the fixture should remain the property of the Capitol and be returned upon request.

Now, Byrd wants it back.

But Clement E. Conger, curator of the White House, says he has urged the President to keep it. Conger argues that the chandelier was bought by a president for use in the White House. It was one of the items auctioned off by Theodore Roosevelt when he became president. The Capitol bought it and installed it in an office now used by Byrd.

So far, Carter has given no indication what he will do.

The male chauvinist of the week award goes to Sen. Barry Goldwater, who opposed an amendment to the military procurement bill that would have authorized the secretary of defense to open up additional areas in the military to women.

Goldwater, a major general in the Air Force reserve, said "I would not want a woman flying on my wing because I would be just naturally more interested in her safety than my own or the objective of hitting the enemy, and chances are I would get clobbered.

"So, I want them back where they belong. I have always said I have nothing at all against a woman doing anything a man can do, as long as she gets home in time to cook dinner."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill was giving reporters his assessment of the prospects of House action on a number of major bills.

A reporter asked what the Senate would do.

"I never speak for the Senate," said the speaker. "I know very few of them."

Bigger tax credits for elderly moves into House

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri House Economics Committee endorsed a Senate-passed plan for increased tax credits for the elderly Tuesday, and sent the measure to the full House.

Under the bill, which amended the so-called "circuit breaker" tax plan, the income tax credit for the elderly would be increased and an estimated 3,500 more persons would be eligible. About 55,000 persons benefited from the law last year.

Sponsored by Sen. Harriett Woods, D-University City, the bill easily cleared the House Revenue Committee last week and is given a fair chance of passing this session.

In other committee action Tuesday, a conference appropriations committee met late into the night trying to work out a compromise on the five funding measures passed by the House and Senate. The bills appropriate about $2 billion of the state's $3 billion budget.

The committee agreed to keep funds in the state budget for the Missouri Elections Commission even though the constitutionality of the law that set up that body is being questioned before the state Supreme Court.

Earlier, the Senate had adopted a funding bill which slashed the bulk of the $453,000 authorized by the House for the commission.

Representatives on the conference committee warned senators that the compromise funding measure might run into trouble in the House if the commission's allotment was substantially reduced.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Donald Manford, D-Kansas City, said the conference committee would authorize the same amount given the commission last year— about $40,000 less than this year's request. He added: "And we'll hope like hell they (the courts) throw the law out."

House panel members expressed concern about taking the elections commission money out before the court decision on the matter. But senators on the committee noted that if the court decides the law is unconstitutional and the commission is then eliminated, the state will have thrown that money "down a rathole."

Senators asked that if the court rules the law void, the commission should have a specified number of days to vacate the office before the funding lapses. Conference committee staff members were to find out today how much time would be needed, and the number of days would be included in the appropriations measure.

Other differences between the House and Senate versions of the funding measures, including funds for the state's Public Counsel office and enforcement of the lobbyist registration law, were to be considered by the committee today.

The circuit breaker tax credit attempts to relieve the elderly, who have incomes of pess than $7,500, of the burden of rising property taxes.

Persons eligible can receive an income tax credit or an actual tax refund for the property tax portion of the rent they pay each year based on computations from a standardized table.

The bill, which would cost an additional $3.5 million in tax credits or cash refunds, would return all property taxes or 20 per cent of the rent paid by persons with less than $2,400 income a year. That would be an increased credit or refund of as much as $48.

Legislation creating an April presidential preference primary for Missouri remained stalled in a Senate committee Tuesday night, despite a plea from a spokesman for House Speaker Kenneth Rothman that the bill be passed. Rothman, who supports the bill, had asked that the committee endorse the measure, but the Senate Apportionment, Elections and Military Affairs Committee has yet to vote on the measure.

The bill, which has been opposed by Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick, also requires that national convention delegates vote for the candidate they announced they were committed to for two ballots or until the candidate withdraws.

Malden rejects bond issue

By The Associated Press

Voters in the Jaspar School District Tuesday approved a 22-cent levy increase, while a 25-cent increase was rejected for the second time at Poplar Bluff.

Malden voters rejected, 256-286, a proposed $150,000 bond issue for a swimming pool and recreation area.

The levy increase at Jaspar was approved, 334-224, and the Poplar Bluff proposal, which needed a two-thirds majority to pass, was rejected 790-681.

The levy for the Jaspar School District will increase from $3.53 to $3.75. A similar proposal was defeated April 5.

Psychologist reveals new view on criminal behavior

WASHINGTON (AP) — Criminal behavior is not a mental illness and cannot be reversed by giving people education, jobs or money, says a Freudian psychologist involved in an intensive federal study of crime.

Dr. Stanton E. Samenow has worked for the last seven years at a federally run Washington mental hospital, where he assisted the late Dr. Samuel Yochelson in an ambitious study of how criminals think and what makes them different.

Samenow told a news conference Monday the experience caused the psychologists to throw out orthodox beliefs that people committed crimes because they felt guilty and subconsciously needed to be punished.

Since the search for a cause didn't work, the psychologist said, he and Yochelson, who died last November, stopped asking why and began looking at how the criminals thought.

Samenow said he and Yochelson identified 53 separate thinking patterns that each of their 225 hardcore criminals, from white-collar crooks to grade school dropouts, had in common.

Those characteristics included anger, pride, sentimentality, lying, intolerance of fear and procrastination. While many people have some of these qualities, he said, criminals "have them all to an extreme.

"Lying is a way of life to make fools of other people," he said.

After several years of their work, Samenow said, Yochelson discovered his subjects "examined him more than he examined them."

"These men," he said, "rejected their parents, schools and society long before the institutions rejected them. They had made a series of choices early in life that had nothing to do with family, neighborhood, race or socioeconomic factors."

Samenow said he and Yochelson sought to change thinking patterns of the criminals that had developed over a lifetime, and in recent years experienced considerable success.

By intensive retraining of the criminal personality, and by refusing to be fooled by criminals, "change agents" — as Samenow called himself and Yochelson — are able to attain a measure of success.

In the last three years, he said, seven of the 24 hardcore criminals who went through the new treatment have become constructive law-abiding citizens.

Sen. Byrd wants Carter to return chandelier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The matter of the majority leader's chandelier is the latest crisis in relations between Congress and the Carter administration.

Will Jimmy Carter return the 11-foot chandelier Jacqueline Kennedy borrowed from the Senate 15 years ago? Or will he accept the recommendation that the chandelier remain in the White House and risk incurring the displeasure of Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd?

On such a matter might hang the fate of the Carter legislative program.

It seems that former Majority Leader Mike Mansfield agreed to allow Mrs. Kennedy to borrow the chandelier, which was hanging in the Capitol, and install it in the White House. Mrs. Kennedy was redecorating the White House with antiques of historical significance.

The chandelier, one of three bought in 1873 by Ulysses S. Grant, was taken to the White House and now hangs in the Treaty Room on the second floor.

Before he let it be taken from the Capitol, Mansfield stipulated that the fixture should remain the property of the Capitol and be returned upon request.

Now, Byrd wants it back.

But Clement E. Conger, curator of the White House, says he has urged the President to keep it. Conger argues that the chandelier was bought by a president for use in the White House. It was one of the items auctioned off by Theodore Roosevelt when he became president. The Capitol bought it and installed it in an office now used by Byrd.

So far, Carter has given no indication what he will do.

Dear Ann Landers

Ode to the Eppic-Curean

Dear Ann: Oh Yuck! Not only do you defend the practice of asking for a "taste" from the plate of a fellow diner, you make those of us who do not agree sound like anti-social creeps. I wrote this poem for you:

ODE TO THE EPPIE-CUREAN

There's a habit that I hate:
Swiping morsels off the plate
By friendly folks who only want to share
Their streptococci, my eclair.
"Gimme a taste, gimme a lick."
Those gregarious people sure are quick!
I've barely time to thank the Lord--
My lunch becomes their smorgasbord.
If they're happy, so well adjusted,
The kind of people to be trusted,
How come they always seem to feel
There's something special about my meal? -- Take The Whole Think In Colorado

Dear Take: Your meter is a little off, but the idea is what counts. I confess I received a lot more flak on this subject than I expected. Here's another one:

Dear Ann Landers: So you think it's a sign of affection to ask for a taste of someone's food? You further believe it's a sign of generosity to give a taste. Well, I resent being asked and I know why.

When I was a very young child I had no rights whatsoever. I cam from a large family and physical space and personal privacy were not available to me.

Only when I left home did I enjoy having space and objects that were my very own. These privileges mean a great deal to me. This is why I resent it when someone asks for a taste. I feel they are encroaching on my property.

I wouldn't dream of asking for a taste of food from someone else's plate. I am aware that they may have had to fight for their "very own plate," the way I had to fight for mine. -- Dilly Dolly Of Dayton

Dear Dolly: Little did I realize that this tasting business was going to end up with poetry and case histories. But I thank you ALL for writing.

Bills to aid elderly perfected

By REP. GARY L. SMITH
157th District

JEFFERSON CITY — Last week was probably the last week for working on House Bills as the Missouri House began working on bills which have already passed the Senate. With only four weeks left in the present session, there is little chance of passage unless a bill has already passed one House.

The Senate last week approved a new death penalty bill. This bill will replace the old death penalty law which was recently declared unconstitutional by the Missouri Supreme Court. The new bill contains an emergency clause which means that the bill will take effect immediately upon being signed by the governor.

In my estimation, the new law will be upheld because it incorporates aspects of various other state laws which have been upheld by the United States Supreme Court.

There were two House bills perfected this week which are designed to give some assistance to senior citizens.

The first was a bill which will exempt prescription drugs from the sales tax. Since senior citizens are the ones primarily affected by the sales tax on drugs, the passage of this measure would result in relatively little loss of revenue to the State. It also appears that this is the only bill that has a chance of passage which will give the people of this State some tax reform.

A second bill, a resolution which would be placed before the voters next year, will require the Conservation Commission to provide hunting and fishing permits, without cost, to senior citizens. The resolution, if accepted by the voters, will amend our Constitution to this effect.

In the final four weeks of the session, I think we are going to see a large number of very significant bills come before the Legislature. Unless certain controversial issues cause too much delay, or unless personal bickering becomes too great, it appears that this will be a successful session.

CHARLES PERRY

On this date:

In 1803, poet and philosopher Ralph Waldo Emerson was born in Boston.

In 1862, Confederate troops under Gen. Stonewall Jackson defeated a Union force in the Civil War Battle of Winchester, Va.

In 1944, in World War II, the Anzio beachhead in Italy was linked with the Allied front.

In 1961, President John Kennedy asked the nation to strive to send Americans to the moon within the next decade.

In 1970, the United States placed the first of its MIRV missiles in underground concrete silos at an Air Force base at Minot, N.D.

Five years ago: President Richard Nixon and Soviet officials were conferring in Moscow on increasing trade between the United States and the Soviet Union.

One year ago: Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, in Luxembourg, said there were indications that Cuban military forces were being withdrawn from Angola.

Today's birthdays: President Tito of Yugoslavia is 85 years old. Writer Herman Wouk is 62.

Thought for today: Goodness is the only investment that never fails — Henry David Thoreau, American writer, 1817-1862.

The Daily Standard,

I attended the graduation services of our seniors last Friday night at the field house and I was so very proud of the class of young people who were graduating. It was so very evident that the students who had prepared speeches had put much hard work and careful thought into them. Rev. Butler's admonishment to the young people was so fitting to the theme the students had chosen. The whole student body was so very attentive to the program.

However, I cannot say the same for the people of the audience, I'm sorry to say. Have adults forgotten (or did they ever know?) there is such a thing as respect and reverence in some services? The graduation service is one of these times. It is a solemn occasion. A time of transcision for these students, a time of fullfilment for some and a time of proudness for their parents.

It was almost impossible for a parent to hear his child's name called or to see him (or her) as he went forward to receive his diploma. Adults were running in and out of the building, talking during the speeches, making all kinds of disturbence and showing no respect whatever.

I'm sure the graduating students were not at all proud of the confusion on the floor before they were ever finished receiving their diplomas.

I do hope that before next year arrives some different kind of place is secured for the graduation services and a reserved area is provided for parents and relatives of graduates.

Thank you.

Hearing on PSC phone directory rule planned

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Public Service Commission will hold a hearing next month on a rule that would require telephone companies to publish a directory notice informing utility customers of their rights.

"If this rule is adopted, consumers would have a handy reference in their telephone directories that would tell them how to file a complaint and how to get in touch with the Public Srvice Commission," said PSC Chairman James P. Mulvaney.

As now proposed, the rule would require that telephone directories contain a notice explaining that all utilities under PSC regulation must provide safe, adequate service at reasonable rates.

The notice would include a list of the types of companies the PSC regulates and describe the types that are exempt from commission regulation.

Hearing on PSC phone directory rule planned

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Public Service Commission will hold a hearing next month on a rule that would require telephone companies to publish a directory notice informing utility customers of their rights.

"If this rule is adopted, consumers would have a handy reference in their telephone directories that would tell them how to file a complaint and how to get in touch with the Public Srvice Commission," said PSC Chairman James P. Mulvaney.

As now proposed, the rule would require that telephone directories contain a notice explaining that all utilities under PSC regulation must provide safe, adequate service at reasonable rates.

The notice would include a list of the types of companies the PSC regulates and describe the types that are exempt from commission regulation.

Lois Perry receives Human relations award

Mrs. Lois Perry of Bloomfield was presented the annual Human Relations Award Tuesday at the third annual Human Relations Day program at Sikeston Regional Center for Developmental Disabilities.

This event is held each year with a dinner for all the center employes, and guests to stress the importance of "good human relations." Guests included David Brent, chief human relations officer for the State Department of Mental Health, and Mrs. Brent.

David Ragan, director, welcomed and introduced the guests. Mrs. Linda Sloan, acting human relations chairman, introduced David Brent, Guest Speaker, who spoke on the progress being made in human relations in the Department of Mental Health.

Each year a Human Relations Award is presented to the employe selected by balloting based on the following criteria: The employee must exemplify through superior performance, attitude and interpersonal relationships the spirit of equality, justice and brotherhood; and by so doing affect better relations in the Center.

The Human Relations Committee members at the Center are: Jerry Bishop, chairman; Earsell Whittaker, Irene Jordan, Janet Grooms, Linda Sloan, Dorothy Harris and Auvine Lynxwiler. Dinner was prepared by Sharp's Catering Service and each employe attending the dinner shared in this cost.

Theme of the program was "Happiness Is: Working Together", the dining room walls were decorated with "Happiness Is" posters. These colorful posters were made by Mrs. Ruth Teeters (last year's Human Relations Award winner) Special Education Teacher III, and her students.

NRA focus now against gun control

CINCINNATI (AP) — The National Rifle Association is cutting back on its conservation and wildlife programs to devote most of its energies to fighting gun control.

Some top NRA staffers see the decision as akin to "pinning a bullseye on and inviting the anti-gunners to take potshots at you."

Maj. Gen. Maxwell Rich was ousted from his position as executive vice president in a weekend move he called a coup.

He was dumped by a coalition of dissident NRA members called the Federation for NRA, who installed past president Harlon Carter, 63, in the top staff job.

The dissidents accused the organization of going soft on gun control under Rich's direction.

"It was a coup," Rich said. The Federation "used lists of life members to get the right ones to come to the meeting and vote the way they wanted."

Only life members can vote at the annual meetings. About 1,000 of about 200,000 life members attended the sessions.

Carter, a former head of the U.S. Border Patrol, was given a mandate to take the organization back to the forefront of the battle against gun laws.

The NRA has long been a major lobbying force against gun control legislation.

One Carter supporter said, "People who are interested in conservation can join the Sierra Club. If they're interested in bird-watching there's the Audubon Society. But this organization is for people who want to own and shoot guns."

Eritrea became a province of Ethiopia in 1962, although it was federated with its southern neighbor ten years earlier. The province was an Italian colony during World War II.

Ex-dropout has success tale to tell

MORGANFIELD, Ky. (AP) — Twelve years ago, Warren Rhodes was a street-wise gang member, an eighth-grade dropout in trouble with the law. This year he earned his Ph.D.

He returned to his alma mater — the Breckinridge Job Corps Center here — to tell this year's graduates on Wednesday that "they can do it, too. All they have to do is maintain the positive attitude that you develop at Breck."

In an interview Monday, Rhodes said, "The Job Corps rescued me. If it hadn't been for the corps I'd probably be doing 40 years in jail today."

Ron Wormald, the center's manager of community relations, said Monday that he learned of Rhodes' success — a doctorate in clinical psychology — in a letter last January in which Rhodes asked to "come back and address the graduating class."

"All of a sudden, in the last paragraph, he said he was working on his Ph.D.," Wormald said. "You can imagine how floored I was."

Wormald said he checked with the Job Corps' central office in Washington and "they said it's the first time a graduate has ever received his Ph.D."

Gasified coal plant opposed

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's immediate energy needs do not include a coal gasification plant, according to a nuclear engineering professor at the University of Missouri.

"Coal gasification eight to 10 years from now is something that could be seriously considered, but not today," Walter Meyer, chairman of the school's nuclear engineering department, said Monday.

"It's going to take time and we should wait for that time to elapse before we embark on it," Meyer said.

Meyer was one of three co-chairmen of a 12-member group formed Monday to oppose development of a proposed coal gasification plant in Boone County.

Members of the group, Missourians for Responsive Energy Development, said they would question, investigate and publicize the economic and technical feasibility of proposals for meeting mid-Missouri's energy needs.

Huntsdale, in western Boone County on the Missouri River, has been mentioned as a possible site for the plant.

Missouri's Coal Gasification Advisory Committee is directing the gasification program in hopes of securing authorization and funding for two plants that would be operational by the early 1980s. A site is also being sought for a plant in northern Missouri.

Aging office to present state plan

JEFFERSON CITY — A state plan for the expenditure of $12,000,000 in federal funds on programs for the state's elderly will be presented by the State Office of Aging at a public hearing in Jefferson City.

The meeting will be held at 1:30 p.m. June 7 in the Conference room, third floor of the Broadway State Office Building.

Missouri Office of Aging's acting director, Roberta Gardine, announced, "The hearing gives the general public an opportunity to express their opinions and ideas on the plan which allocates funds to the state's nine area agencies on aging for such things as senior centers, transportation services, and congregate meals".

Suggestions heard at the meeting will be taken into consideration by the Office of aging before finalization of the plan.

"Following the open hearing, the plan must be presented to Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale for approval and will then go to the Administration on Aging, Department of Health, Education and Welfare in Washington", said acting director Gardine.

Teasdale fills 4 positions on licensing boards

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Joseph Teasdale has filled four spots on state licensing boards, his office announced Tuesday.

Named to the state Board of Accountancy are Gerald Sommer of St. Louis County, who will succeed Arthur Betz, and Edwin G. Denham of Joplin, who will replace Norman Spitzmiller of Sikeston.

Ralph A. Powell of Lee's Summit was appointed to the state Board of Chiropractic Examiners, succeeding Lyle J. Bouck Jr. Powell is a former city councilman and mayor of Lee's Summit.

Appointed to the Veterinary Medical Board was Patricia M. Luedders of Hallsville, who will succeed Leland L. Rice.

Judge nixes jobless pay to strikers

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge ruled that it is unconstitutional for striking workers to collect unemployment pay.

U.S. District Court Judge Richard Owen ruled on a suit brought by New York Telephone and other utility companies complaining that the state law authorizing such payments unfairly compelled employers to finance their own striking employes.

"The New York labor law, to the extent it provides for the payment of unemployment compensation to strikers, is strike intervention on behalf of the strikers, causes an employer to finance its own strikers, is in conflict with federal labor law policy, and is therefore unconstitutional and void under the supremacy clause of the United States Constitution," Owen ruled in a 37-page opinion.

The suit, filed in 1973, stemmed from a strike two years earlier against the Bell System.

It complained that the employers had to pay the state's Compensation Fund $40 million for $49 million of benefits given to the strikers before the labor dispute ended.

In New York, the walkout lasted seven months, and 38,000 strikers each became eligible for unemployment compensation of up to $95 a week, tax free, after eight weeks.

3 counties to share funding

KENNETT — Funding of the Southeast Missouri Mental Health Center serving Dunklin, New Madrid and Pemiscot counties was discussed at a meeting on Friday.

The local support of the center, approximately $50,000 per year for the first four years of service, has been maintained by Dunklin County. Since the center serves the three counties (mandated by law), the necessity of receiving financial support from Pemiscot and New Madrid counties was emphasized.

The board of trustees of Dunklin County Memorial Hospital invited the County Court Judges from each county, state area legislators and Advisory Council (five members from each county) to attend the meeting. The decision reached at the meeting was to bill the county courts of Pemiscot and New Madrid counties for care rendered to indigent patients from their counties. It was felt that this was the most equitable manner to share the local cost of the SeMo Mental Health Center.

BOOK REVIEW

WHO IS TEDDY VILLANOVA? By Thomas Berger. Delacorte. 247 Pages. $7.95.

Admirers of such previous Thomas Berger novels as "Regiment Of Women" and "Little Big Man" are not going to be overjoyed by the talented writer's latest effort, "Who is Teddy Villanova?"

Berger's attempt to satirize the private-eye novel — as practiced by such masters of the genre as Raymond Chandler — is laudable enough, but, after a hundred pages or so, not very entertaining.

The problem is compounded by Berger's constant use of prose that echoes with memories of past writers. The first sentence, for example, is "Call me Russel Wren." Herman Melville patented that when he opened "Moby Dick" with "Call me Ishmael." And it's a bit hard to take a cop, albeit a phoney one, who utters such Shakespeare-like sentences as, "Did you cause that man to shuffle off his mortal coil?" and "Then we must look for a murtherer most foul? Or could the victim have made his own quietus with a bare bodkin?"

The plot, or as much of it as can be pieced out, concerns the above-mentioned Wren, a former English teacher turned private eye and not doing well in his new profession. One day, as he sits in his true-to-the-form, worse-than-shabby office, Wren is approached by a giant who beats him up and warns him to tell Teddy Villanova to lay off Donald Washburn.

Since Wren has heard of neither of these people he naturally is confused. And the confusion grows. The giant turns up "dead" in Wren's office, but then later is seen alive. Washburn shows up but knows nothing of Villanova. And on and on.

Those who like shaggy dog stories might go for this, but it does seem to take forever to find out who Teddy Villanova is.

Pesticide regulation may affect consumers

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Consumers will feel the squeeze as the federal government tightens its grip on chemicals allowed for use on crops, according to industry specialists.

They predict vegetable prices will increase, quality will decline, some specialty foods may become scarce and gardeners and specialty crop growers will be hard hit.

At issue is an Environmental Protection Agency regulation that requires registration of pesticides and labels that carry a list of specific crops on which a pesticide may be used. Extensive testing is a part of the requirement.

Companies would rather leave a minor crop off the label than spend thousands of dollars testing the effects of a pesticide that has limited sales.

"I've talked to some chemical companies that said if it's not one of the major crops like cotton, corn, soybean or small grains, they won't touch it with a 10-foot pole," said Dr. Winand Hock, a pesticides specialist at Pennsylvania State University.

"The effect will be on the homeowner and the small specialty-crop farmer, not the corn grower." He also said mushrooms, strawberries, blueberries and some varieties of apricots and nectarines could become expensive or scarce.

"We definitely have fewer choices of pesticides," said Ed Hopkins, a Pennsylvania vegetable grower. "Some companies just discontinued their products altogether.

"In the future, certain minor crops, things like basil, herbs, horse radishes, parsnips or leek, won't be grown. There won't be a No. 1 (quality) crop. The consumer will either take the cabbage with a hole in the leaf or go without," he said.

After EPA banned the use of the pesticide DDT, Boyd Mertz a greenhouse tomato grower in northcentral Pennsylvania, turned to a more expensive alternative.

"We're using a gas, an extremely dangerous material, on the white fly," he said.

The fly lays its eggs for 21 days, and DDT had a residual effect of 30 days and took care of the problem," Mertz said

"Now we have to spray every three weeks. The material costs $200 a gallon and we use a gallon everytime we spray."

The consumer foots the bill, he said.

"We can only absorb so much. If the consumer wants to pay the cost, he can have any environmental regulations he wants," Mertz said.

EPA staffer Bob Kuykendall conceded that, "Some crops have slipped through the cracks" when pesticides are registered for certain limited uses. But he said EPA is trying to develop a system that would permit the use of a single pesticide on a group of related crops, such as leafy green vegetables.

Dirt Band leaves Soviet fans yelling for more

MOSCOW (AP) — The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, the first American rock group to tour the Soviet Union, ended their visit with a concert that had a Moscow audience cheering, whistling and yelling for more.

"At the end we had them bouncing in their seats, which made us feel really good," pianist-guitarist Jackie Robinson Clark said after Monday's concert.

"We don't have anything like this here," a teen-aged girl said. "Ours are all about the spring or the snow, or they're patriotic songs."

The Dirt Band played a bright foot-stomping blend of country, blue grass and rock for 80,000 Soviets during a three-week tour under a U.S.-Soviet cultural program sponsored by the U.S. State Department.

Group members said audience reactions varied throughout the tour from Riga to Tbilisi to Yerevan to Leningrad.

In Riga, the audience sat respectfully throughout the concert. "I thought we had bombed," said Hanna. But at the end the auditorium exploded in 20 minutes of applause.

In Yerevan, 6,000 fans clapped and danced inside while 15,000 without tickets surged against the gates outside where a teargas grenade was thrown.

In Leningrad, police ringed the stage to keep away the fans. Bearded banjo player John McEuen said when people rose from their seats they were told to sit down.

In Moscow several young men and women ran on stage with flowers in the Russian tradition, embarrassing bandsmen with kisses.

Tickets sold for up to $8 — a day's pay for many Russians — and reportedly went for up to six times that amount on the black market.

Many Russians, who have plenty of rubles but little to spend them on, were glad to pay. A large share of seats went to families of officials and audiences were composed of many middle-aged people.

"I wish we'd had the opportunity to play to more young people," said lead guitarist Jeffrey Hanna. "I know there's a big rock 'n' roll audience out there."

"It was definitely worthwhile to come here and put a dent in the door for American music," McEuen said.

It is a door that has been opening gradually since the 1960s when the first carefully controlled Soviet groups were allowed to perform.

"Our kids know all about American rock," one Soviet said. Many have learned about American rock from foreign broadcasts and there has long been a lively black market in rock records and tapes.

Ford criticized for huckester behavior

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential press secretary J.F. terHorst says Gerald Ford is becoming a millionaire through "huckstering and hustling and merchandising of the presidency."

TerHorst, in the cover story for the July-August issue of Free Enterprise magazine, said Ford and his family stand to make as much as $3 million within the next few years on publishing and broadcasting deals. He said these give Ford a "money-grubbing appearance."

TerHorst quoted Ford as saying "That is what the free enterprise system is all about.... It's a private matter. I'm a retired public official and I don't intend to discuss it. I have certain areas that are private now that weren't previously."

TerHorst, who resigned as Ford's first press secretary when Ford pardoned Richard Nixon, noted that Ford is not the first ex-president to make money after leaving office.

But terHorst added, "Many of us expected honest, decent Jerry Ford to set a higher standard for ex-presidents than has been the case in the past. All this huckstering and hustling and merchandising of the presidency, with Ford's eager assent, robs the office of something fine and decent."

He said the Ford family's money-making ventures include:

—$1 million from the National Broadcasting Co. for Ford's participation in programs during the next five years and for first chance to broadcast portions of his memoirs.

—$500,000 from NBC to Mrs. Ford for participating in programs during the next two years.

—$1 million from Reader's Digest and Harper & Row to publish memoirs of Ford and his wife.

—$35,000 to $40,000 per year in salary from the American Enterprise Institute, a Washington D.C. think tank.

—$100,000 for 10 campus and lecture appearances.

—$50,000 a year in salary as president of Eisenhower Fellowships.

In addition, Ford now receives $66,000 a year in pension as a former president and $30,500 in pension as a former member of Congress, plus a free office, free use of the mail for nonpolitical purposes and Secret Service protection, terHorst said.

Bob McAdoo of the New York Knicks scored the 10,000th point of his NBA career on Feb. 9 against the Indiana Pacers.

But terHorst added, "Many of us expected honest, decent Jerry Ford to set a higher standard for ex-presidents than has been the case in the past. All this huckstering and hustling and merchandising of the presidency, with Ford's eager assent, robs the office of something fine and decent."

He said the Ford family's money-making ventures include:

—$1 million from the National Broadcasting Co. for Ford's participation in programs during the next five years and for first chance to broadcast portions of his memoirs.

—$500,000 from NBC to Mrs. Ford for participating in programs during the next two years.

—$1 million from Reader's Digest and Harper & Row to publish memoirs of Ford and his wife.

—$35,000 to $40,000 per year in salary from the American Enterprise Institute, a Washington D.C. think tank.

—$100,000 for 10 campus and lecture appearances.

—$50,000 a year in salary as president of Eisenhower Fellowships.

In addition, Ford now receives $66,000 a year in pension as a former president and $30,500 in pension as a former member of Congress, plus a free office, free use of the mail for nonpolitical purposes and Secret Service protection, terHorst said.

Bob McAdoo of the New York Knicks scored the 10,000th point of his NBA career on Feb. 9 against the Indiana Pacers.

Best athlete diet?

DEAR DR. LAMB — From what I've read I've always thought any athlete would need a high protein diet, but at the last Olympic games some of the athletes were supposedly on high carbohydrate diets.

Would such a diet be recommended for a weight lifter trying to build muscle as well as a runner or a boxer who needs long-lasting energy? Would you give an example of a high carbohydrate diet?

DEAR READER — The only reason one needs protein as opposed to carbohydrate or fat in the diet is to provide enough of the amino acids in protein to replace lost protein from the body or to build new protein as in new muscle growth.

The calorie needs of the body for energy can be supplied by any of these three basic foods. Your question is a bit like asking me if you should burn coal or wood to heat the house. There is no advantage in consuming more protein than is needed for the building processes I mentioned.

Carbohydrates are a good source of energy because the body can process them rapidly and they require less oxygen to enable your cells to release the energy than does either fat or protein. That is because carbohydrates already contain some oxygen.

Whether you are using carbohydrates, protein or fat you need to consume enough calories to meet your needs and still leave the protein available for building purposes. So, 100 grams of protein a day with adequate total calorie intake from any source is more than adequate for most muscle building programs despite what you may have been told by people interested in selling protein supplements.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control. It explains this in more detail for you. Others who want this information can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing.

Vegetables, fruits and cereals are mostly carbohydrates. For concentrated carbohydrates you want foods devoid of roughage and water. The ultimate on this scale for energy is sugar. All of the sweets are concentrated carbohydrates obtained from vegetables, fruits and cereals — corn syrup, beet sugar, honey from flowers' nectar. Starch is also concentrated carbohydrate and is broken down to sugar by the digestive process before it is absorbed.

The advantage of the carbohydrate foods also is that one can increase the calorie intake without increasing the fat and cholesterol consumption. Many of the so called high protein foods contain lots of fat and cholesterol. A high percentage of the calories in a porterhouse steak or many roasts are from fat not protein.

You should know that an excess of any calories — above what you need for real muscle growth, maintaining your body and providing energy for your activities — will be converted to fat and cholesterol by your body. Your body can change sugar to cholesterol. A good diet for everyone, including athletes, will thus avoid obesity while providing the needed energy requirements.

Too much talent

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — A recent two-day conference here, devoted exclusively to thoughtful discussion about what all of us will be doing with our lives in the coming decades, seemed strangely out of place in this city.

Washington is rightfully notorious for its fixation with overnight crises, crash programs and short-term solutions. Too many of the nation's supposed leaders seldom look beyond yesterday's problems or tomorrow's headlines.

But this meeting was different. Its theme was "Life Cycle Planning: New Strategies for Education, Work and Retirement in America." Its sponsors were the Center for Policy Process, a nonprofit research organization, and the publishing house of Holt, Rinehart and Winston.

In analyzing contemporary patterns of education and work, conference leaders produced an impressive array of facts and statistics to back up their claim that we already are a nation with "a glut of over-educated, under-utilized people."

Perhaps most striking was a simple chart which vividly demonstrated that America, for the first time in its history, is producing more college graduates than it has jobs to offer people with such training.

For countless decades the country had a shortage of college-trained talent. As recently as 1970, 13.2 per cent of the nation's work force was composed of college graduates but 14.2 per cent of the jobs to be filled were in the professional and technical category.

But in the ensuing seven years the gradual increase in the number of jobs for which college training is appropriate has failed to match the soaring growth in the number of graduates.

The Labor Department is predicting a "surplus" of 1.6 million college graduates by 1985 and an analysis prepared for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare projects an oversupply at that time of 6 to 8 million, according to one presentation at the conference.

That grim forecast was offered by Fred Best and Barry Stern, two young men who painted a gloomy picture of brutal competition for the country's preferred jobs during the coming years. Among the elements they cited:

"People today have higher occupational aspirations than ever because of greater affluence, higher levels of educational attainment and declining family obligations.

"Parents want their children to be better off than they were. And the children, who have been nurtured by considerable amounts of schooling and more financial resources, agree."

"Young, better-educated members of minority groups are seeking the job opportunities denied their parents."

"More women are re-entering the labor force to become full-time career workers." In 1940, 9 per cent of all mothers were members of the country's work force. By 1970, that figure had soared to 42 per cent.

We already have entered an era in which there simply are not enough preferred jobs to meet those demands. The initial round of dissatisfaction is demonstrated in a pair of Labor Department surveys which show that a quarter to a third of all workers feel "overqualified" for their jobs.

Some progress has been made in eliminating employment discrimination against women and members of minority groups, but "not so for youth and older people, whose position in the job market has deteriorated steadily during the last several decades," reported Best and Stern.

"The poor or dead-end jobs in our society are being assumed principally and increasingly by women, youth and minorities," they added. "Indeed, these groups are competing with each other for the same jobs."

Acreage controls on wheat called likely

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Rep. Thomas S. Foley, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said Sunday night it seems inevitable that the government will order wheat acreage controls before seeding this fall for the 1978 winter wheat crop.

Foley, D-Wash., said bulging grain bins and declining export markets were likely to trigger the government action.

He made his remarks Sunday night at a special Farm Digest Town Meeting recorded at Shenandoah, Iowa, for airing on Public Broadcast Service television stations this week, the Kansas City Times reported.

Foley was interviewed by Chet Randolph, host of the PBS program; Fred Kiewit, farm editor of the Kansas City Star and Times, and farmers from Missouri and Iowa at the taping.

"I don't think there is any likelihood at all that we can avoid some production controls on wheat. I think we are going to have some set-aside this fall," Foley said.

The United States will have a carryover of about 1.2 billion bushels of wheat at the start of the summer harvest, and that is enough to supply all domestic and many export requirements for about 18 months. Farmers are expected to harvest about 2 billion bushels this year.

In addition, Canada has a large carryover of wheat this year and there have been reports that the Soviet Union and the European Economic Community and other wheat producing regions of the world also have good to exellent wheat prospects this year.

Foley said he doubted there would be international wheat agreements to stabilize world prices at a profitable level despite Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland's meetings with Canadian officials.

"I don't see any likelihood in the forseeable future of an international wheat agreement or any international commodity ageements in grain," Foley said.

Although Foley said he saw no chance of an agreement, he did not fault Bergland for his efforts. "I think it is perfectly reasonable for Secretary Bergland to talk to our Canadian friends. We ought at least not to be in cut-throat competition to run down the price of wheat," he said.

County jails overcrowded by prisoners

KANSAS CITY (AP) — County jails are overcrowded because municipal and state governments are unable or unwilling to hold persons convicted of crimes or awaiting trial, a spokesman for county officials said on the eve of a national conference on the problem.

"Municipalities are getting out of the criminal lockup business, states are getting out of the jail business, and counties are getting all of them," said Dr. Francis P. McQuade, president of the National Association of County Civil Attorneys, here to attend the National Assembly on the Jail Crisis which runs through Wednesday.

He said the brunt of the jail problem is falling on the over 3,000 counties because cities, with their falling tax bases, are turning over much of what they previously handled to the counties. After convictionin a county court, prisoners who would ordinarily be retained by the state are being refused because of overcrowding and returned to the county, he said.

Morris E. Lasker, judge in the U.S. District Court southern district of New York, believes keeping people out of jails is one solution to overcrowding problems.

"We need to help people before they are arrested," Lasker said. "We need to divert people out of jail, those who don't belong there. And conditions must be more humane for those who do belong."

McQuade said those who are imprisoned are making it increasingly difficult for the governmental body where they are incarcerated by demanding, often through federal class action suits, that conditions in the jail be improved.

"With the use of legal services for the poor and public defenders and law libraries in jails, prisoners are drafting very effective petitions to the court," McQuade said. "When they file a proper cause of action under the First Amendment, or the Eighth Amendment, or the Civil Rights Act, the court has to take jurisdiction."

In instances where a federal court judgment goes against the state, Lasker says, states have generally been very cooperative in complying with the court ruling ordering improvement of conditions.

"One of the roles of the court is to tell jail administrators the very thing they want to do," he said.

Former Soviet prisoner eager to see daughters

DETROIT (AP) — An American imprisoned for 18 years in the Soviet Union and allowed to return to the United States only last year, 19 years after he was freed, can hardly wait for the arrival of the two daughters he left behind.

When they get to New York on Wednesday and see this country for the first time, "they won't believe it," says Victor Herman. The oldest daughter, Svetlana, now 25, was a baby when the family survived by eating rats in Siberia.

Svetlana and Janna, 20, will be moving in with him in a Detroit suburb. His fight to get them to the United States took more than a year, but it wasn't nearly as long as his own battle to come home.

Herman, 61, was born in Detroit. In 1931, he sailed to Russia with his parents and 300 other Detroit families to help build an automobile plant under the auspices of the Russian government and Ford Motor Co.

"It was the first American-Russian trade agreement," he said in a weekend interview.

He never gave up his American citizenship and never intended to stay, Herman said.

"I was working parttime at Ford, and my boss told me if I went and stayed in Russia a few years and got a good education I could come back to a good future."

But after he became well known as an athlete and stunt pilot in the Soviet Union, he decided to remain there.

He said that in 1938, when he was 22, he was arrested without explanation.

He spent the next 18 years imprisoned in Siberia.

Herman remembered being beaten for 54 consecutive nights, and said he avoided starvation at his labor camp by trapping and eating rats. He and his wife, Galina, and infant daughter lived in a dugout, and during the blizzards, he told his family what he remembered of America.

In 1956, Herman said, he was sent to another slave labor camp in the southwest Soviet Union.

He was released a year later, then spent almost 20 years trying to get back to the United States.

He won permission in March 1976 and boarded a plane in Moscow, leaving his family behind. His wife divorced him "to avoid government censure as the wife of a man who chose to leave Russia," he said.

From the day he returned, he tried to get his daughters to join him. About a month ago, after he contacted the U.S. State Department, the American Embassy in Moscow and the Committee for Soviet Jewry, Svetlana and Janna were told they could join their father.

His daughters are expected to arrive in New York on Wednesday. They will move with their father into a brick duplex in Oak Park, a suburb of Detroit. Herman said Ford had promised to help his daughters get training as computer programers.

"When the girls get here," Herman said, "they will try to bring their mother over."

He said that in 1938, when he was 22, he was arrested without explanation.

He spent the next 18 years imprisoned in Siberia.

Herman remembered being beaten for 54 consecutive nights, and said he avoided starvation at his labor camp by trapping and eating rats. He and his wife, Galina, and infant daughter lived in a dugout, and during the blizzards, he told his family what he remembered of America.

In 1956, Herman said, he was sent to another slave labor camp in the southwest Soviet Union.

He was released a year later, then spent almost 20 years trying to get back to the United States.

He won permission in March 1976 and boarded a plane in Moscow, leaving his family behind. His wife divorced him "to avoid government censure as the wife of a man who chose to leave Russia," he said.

From the day he returned, he tried to get his daughters to join him. About a month ago, after he contacted the U.S. State Department, the American Embassy in Moscow and the Committee for Soviet Jewry, Svetlana and Janna were told they could join their father.

His daughters are expected to arrive in New York on Wednesday. They will move with their father into a brick duplex in Oak Park, a suburb of Detroit. Herman said Ford had promised to help his daughters get training as computer programers.

"When the girls get here," Herman said, "they will try to bring their mother over."

Union dues upheld for agency shop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public employes who choose not to join a union that bargains for them may be required to support that union financially, the Supreme Court ruled.

By a unanimous vote, the justices ruled that so-called agency shops are just as valid for public employes as for workers in the private sector. An agency shop is a union set-up in which all employes benefiting from the union's collective bargaining are required to pay dues even if they don't join the union.

However, the court said a nonunion employe who is forced to pay dues can require that his or her dues not be used to advance political or other causes undertaken by the union with which the employe does not agree.

But dues collected from nonunion workers can be used to help finance activities such as contract administration and grievance procedures, the court said.

The decision came in a case from Detroit, where more than 600 public school teachers and counselors challenged a union agreement requiring them either to join the Detroit Federation of Teachers or to pay the equivalent of dues each month.

The Detroit teachers who challenged the union agreement had argued that it violated their free speech rights protected by the First Amendment.

But the court said in an opinion written by Justice Potter Stewart that "the differences between public and private sector collective bargaining simply do not translate into differences in First Amendment rights."

The agency shop is a kind of middle ground in unionism. An "open shop" leaves employes free to choose whether to join the union, and if they choose not to join they face no obligation to pay dues. A "union shop" requires union membership for all employes.

Under federal labor law, employes working under an open shop must collect all benefits obtained by the union in collective bargaining even though they choose not to join the union or support it financially.

Stewart said that the limits on use of the money are needed to protect employes' rights of free speech and association.

Firm agrees to stop collecting tax on containers

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Atty. Gen. John Ashcroft announced Monday that his Kansas City office has obtained a voluntary compliance agreement from the Quik-Trip Corp.

The agreement prohibits Quik-Trip from collecting sales tax on reusable containers.

Without specifically admitting to any violations of the Merchandising Practices Act, Quik-Trip also agreed to post notices near its checkouts stating that Missouri law prohibits sales tax from being charged on the transfer of reusable containers and to offer each customer a sales receipt.

The agreement is the result of an investgation begun after a citizen complained he beleved he had been improperly charged sales tax.

Ashcroft said the consumer protection division of his office will continue to monitor all grocery and convenience stores to assure that the practice of charging sales tax on the transfer of reusable containers is discontinued.

Planting ahead of schedule

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Missouri farmers got in an average of 5½ days of field work last week despite some locally heavy rains, according to the state Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

The service said Monday that still more rain is needed for the crops because subsoil moisture supplies remain short. Despite the rains, the soil moisture supplies deteriorated slightly and are now rated at 71 per cent short, 28 per cent adequate and 1 per cent surplus.

Corn planting neared completion this week with 97 per cent of the crop in the ground, about three weeks ahead of the normal 71 per cent. Some replanting has been reported because of cutworm damage.

Soybean planting jumped nearly 30 points to 60 per cent complete this week, two weeks ahead of normal and well ahead of the 34 per cent complete at this time last year.

Grain sorghum planting is also two weeks ahead of normal with 64 per cent complete, up from 46 per cent last week and 35 per cent last year at this time.

The first cutting of alfalfa hay is now 41 per cent finished, five days ahead of normal.

Nearly all the state's wheat is now ready and 18 per cent of the crop has turned color, rating 4 per cent excellent, 53 per cent good, 42 per cent fair and 1 per cent poor.

Cotton planting in the Boothill is virtually complete, finishing about 10 days ahead of normal. Pasture conditions improved only slightly from last week with most in fair to good condition.

Concorde tests show no hazards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Noise and engine emissions from trial flights of the supersonic Concorde in the Washington area have had no adverse health effects, the Federal Aviation Administration says.

The FAA made the assessment Monday in a special report issued one year after the United States permitted British and French Concorde traffic at Dulles International Airport.

The agency also said its measurements showed the Concorde was no noisier than was forecast, although it is on the average at least 80 per cent noisier than the loudest subsonic passenger planes using Dulles.

Last year, the Ford administration approved Concorde flights to Dulles and Kennedy Airport in New York. But the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates Kennedy, blocked the flights. The Carter administration hasn't pressed the issue.

A federal judge has ruled that the port authority has no right to bar the plane from landing but that decision is subject to appeal.

The 16-month trial of SST operations into Dulles will end in September. Transportation Secretary Brock Adams is expected to decide whether the airplane can continue to operate in U.S. service at that time.

The FAA's report came at the end of a year in which the agency received some 1,200 citizen complaints in suburban northern Virginia, where Dulles is situated.

However, an FAA official, referring to allegations of noise pollution, said "We don't find there's really been any health effect" as a result of Concorde noise and emissions.

Planting ahead of schedule

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Missouri farmers got in an average of 5½ days of field work last week despite some locally heavy rains, according to the state Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

The service said Monday that still more rain is needed for the crops because subsoil moisture supplies remain short. Despite the rains, the soil moisture supplies deteriorated slightly and are now rated at 71 per cent short, 28 per cent adequate and 1 per cent surplus.

Corn planting neared completion this week with 97 per cent of the crop in the ground, about three weeks ahead of the normal 71 per cent. Some replanting has been reported because of cutworm damage.

Soybean planting jumped nearly 30 points to 60 per cent complete this week, two weeks ahead of normal and well ahead of the 34 per cent complete at this time last year.

Grain sorghum planting is also two weeks ahead of normal with 64 per cent complete, up from 46 per cent last week and 35 per cent last year at this time.

The first cutting of alfalfa hay is now 41 per cent finished, five days ahead of normal.

Proposed Legislation Worries State Insurance Companies

By ROY HENDIN
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Talk to a Missouri insurance man, and you would almost think the day is near when insurance companies in the state will need to insure themselves.

The reason for the worry is a bill currently before the legislature that would end unfair and deceptive insurance practices such as discrimination in rate making and eligibility requirements. This also is designed to stop unfair claim practices and false promises that cannot be fulfilled.

Proponents say the bill would give more people an opportunity to purchase insurance policies by outlawing the practice of charging higher rates or not selling insurance to people at all because of age, race, sex, family size, occupation or place of residence.

They say the bill also would help policyholders by punishing all involved in selling insurance for failing to make or at least attempt to make prompt, fair and equitable settlements of claims.

Insurance firms also could be punished for attempting to settle claims for less than persons believed they were entitled because of advertising or written material made part of a policy's application.

Opponents of the bill claim the penalities for violations are too stiff, the language too ambiguous and the power enforcer's power too great.

There were 55,000 complaints and inquiries filed by consumers in 1976 against insurance firms. William Lichius, director of public information and consumer affairs for the Missouri Division of Insurance, says this shows the great need for legislation against unfair insurance practices.

However, Henry Edmiston, the outgoing director of the division of insurance, says it is probably "too late in the session" for legislative action by both chambers. He says the bill essentially is dead.

Lichius adds, "I can assure you that it will be introduced again next session," though he says the bill may take a slightly different form. The bill is one of many that Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale has listed as priority legislation.

Gus Lehr, general counsel to the MFA Insurance Co. in Columbia, says the bill has poor and often unclearn wording. He cites words contained often in the bill such as prompt, fair and equitable.

"Nobody knows what these words mean," he says. "They are words of art. They don't define things, but merely pose concerns and questions. The bill is a skeleton. Rules to flesh out the skeleton would have to be mammoth in size."

Glenn Glasgow, general counsel for Silvey Insurance Corp. in Columbia, agrees with Lehr and says the wording of the bill is too vague. "It's like the old adage: I'm against sin, but who is to say what sin is."

Sen. James Conway, recently elected Democratic mayor of St. Louis, is the principal sponsor of the bill. The bill has been held in the Senate Insurance Committee since Jan. 24. He acknowledges there might be "a few minor language problems," but says the bill is "too specific. That's what they (insurance firms) are complaining about."

Referring to the bill's wording that concerns Lehr, Lichius says, "Those same people are using the same language in their policies."

Lichius says 24 states have enacted legislation similar to what is before the General Assembly and none of those states has had trouble interpreting the wording of their laws. He calls the argument "a sidestep of the real issue."

Glasgow says the fact that 24 states have similar laws does not make it right for Missouri.

Lehr says another problem with the bill is that it gives "virtually unlimited power to a regulatory agency that already has ample power." He adds the bill would have the affect of making the director of the division of insurance the virtual head of every insurance firm in the state.

Glasgow says we may be "looking at a situation where one person is judge, jury and prosecutor. The state insurance division already has a lot of authority and this bill just adds more to it."

Laws already exist, says Lehr, that regulate unfair insurance practices. He says the director of insurance can order examinations of insurance firms, refuse to issue licenses because firms are untrustworthy or engage in false or deceptive practices. The director also has powers to prevent false advertising or misrepresentation by a firm.

Neither Glasgow nor Lehr think the director of insurance would abuse his powers now, but he might in the future. Lehr also is worried because "it is not the lawmakers who would determine what the law is," but rather the insurance director.

Edmiston agrees the director does have a tremendous amount of power," and the opportunity for abuse exists in the office, but he adds the same can be said for any position of authority.

Conway says the director "ought to have the leverage" to deal with any unfair practices.

Lehr says the penalties the bill would impose could lead an insurance company down "the road to bankruptcy."

Under current law, an insurance firm cannot be fined more than $500 for a violation fair insurance practices. The bill would impose a maximum penalty of $10,000 with the possibility of a firm's license being suspended or revoked for a violation.

Lehr contends, "We're covered under many othar laws already. The intent was probably a noble one. But he adds that it places companies and clients in a bad position.

Glasgow agrees that the penalties are "way out of line."

Lichius says this is "another scare tactic" used by insurance industry officials. He says the bill clearly spells out that a firm would repeatedly have to violate the law in order to be penalized.

The bill is not intended to put unreasonable controls on insurance firms, says Edmiston, but just to provide authority for the state to take action against unfair discrimination or improper claims practices.

He says the penalties may be harsh, but "we want it to be stiff enough to get their attention." He adds, however, that he would not be opposed to lessening the penalties. "I would have no trouble with the modification of (the penalties)."

Glasgow says the purpose of the bill may be a good one and firms should be disciplined for violating the law. But he thinks firms should be punished individually and that there should not be legislation applying to all the state's insurance firms.

"Certainly the entire industry doesn't have to be tarred by the same brush," he says. "They don't need all of these wide regulations for the entire industry."

Conway says most arguments of industry officials are weak because "they don't want the bill under any circumstances."

Edmiston agrees the director does have a tremendous amount of power," and the opportunity for abuse exists in the office, but he adds the same can be said for any position of authority.

Conway says the director "ought to have the leverage" to deal with any unfair practices.

Lehr says the penalties the bill would impose could lead an insurance company down "the road to bankruptcy."

Under current law, an insurance firm cannot be fined more than $500 for a violation fair insurance practices. The bill would impose a maximum penalty of $10,000 with the possibility of a firm's license being suspended or revoked for a violation.

Lehr contends, "We're covered under many othar laws already. The intent was probably a noble one. But he adds that it places companies and clients in a bad position.

Glasgow agrees that the penalties are "way out of line."

Lichius says this is "another scare tactic" used by insurance industry officials. He says the bill clearly spells out that a firm would repeatedly have to violate the law in order to be penalized.

The bill is not intended to put unreasonable controls on insurance firms, says Edmiston, but just to provide authority for the state to take action against unfair discrimination or improper claims practices.

He says the penalties may be harsh, but "we want it to be stiff enough to get their attention." He adds, however, that he would not be opposed to lessening the penalties. "I would have no trouble with the modification of (the penalties)."

Glasgow says the purpose of the bill may be a good one and firms should be disciplined for violating the law. But he thinks firms should be punished individually and that there should not be legislation applying to all the state's insurance firms.

"Certainly the entire industry doesn't have to be tarred by the same brush," he says. "They don't need all of these wide regulations for the entire industry."

Conway says most arguments of industry officials are weak because "they don't want the bill under any circumstances."
